	– 'Fishing structural over-capacity' means the number of fishing vessels in a particular fishery or metier that are not economically viable based on the available fishing resources;

Or. en

Justification

Fishing structural over-capacity is not defined in the proposal. It is essential to address the over-capacity issue in the European fleets in order that it is properly defined as recommended in the European Court of Auditors report of November 2011. Over-capacity defined in terms of Gross Tonnage and Kilo Watts is not appropriate to dealing with the over-capacity problem which is an economic rather than a traditionally defined capacity issue(GT & KW)

For species of special importance in the region known as the Shetland Box which are biologically sensitive by reason of their exploitation characteristics, fishing within the Shetland Box will be restricted to vessels flying the flag of Member States who have traditionally had access to the area.

Or. en

Justification

Restrictions in the area known as the Shetland Box have been in place since the 1983 CFP Regulation and the area remains an important nursery ground and one which provides vital jobs to often fragile communities. Given the widespread concerns about over-fishing under the existing CFP, it makes no sense to remove restrictions around the Shetland Box thereby allowing more vessels to gain access.

Part 2 – Article 6 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission	Amendment
	Article (6a)
	Coastal and small-scale fishing and small-scale aquaculture
	1. Coastal and artisanal fishing or small-scale fishing, as defined in Article 5, shall be fully incorporated into the Common Fisheries Policy. Small-scale aquaculture in the natural environment, carried out by one-person or family businesses and microbusinesses, and which includes traditional shellfish gathering activities, shall also form part of the policy.
	2. The Union shall contribute to the sustainability of coastal and small-scale fishing and small-scale aquaculture through the following:
	a. reducing red tape, simplifying administrative procedures and increasing the flexibility of management systems in this field.
	b. establishing a programme with specific funding under the European Maritime and Fisheries Fund to tackle the particular problems faced by small-scale operators, without prejudice to their full participation in the sector's other horizontal programmes.
	c. promoting policies concerning quality assurance and introducing labelling to identify such products and raise the profile of high-quality fresh fish which includes the date of the catch and landing.
	d. creating in the maritime area identified in Article 6(2) of this Regulation a network of 'fishery reserves' and 'protected fishing areas' to conserve resources and ensure limited and selective access to them for small-scale fishing, and reserving areas for small-scale aquaculture and traditional shellfish gathering.

e. prohibiting fishing opportunities corresponding to coastal and small-scale artisanal fishing fleets from being transferred to other operators in the sector.

f. incorporating small-scale fishing and aquaculture into fields such as marine strategies, policies on coastal areas and the environment, research and development programmes and the various Structural Funds.

g. promoting measures that increase energy efficiency and help combat climate change.

h. ensuring that producers and products meet the same level of safety, quality and fairness requirements as the rest of the sector.

i. promoting training and cooperation between small-scale operators.

j. raising awareness among the European public of the higher quality of the products of small-scale fishing and aquaculture.

Part 3 – article 7 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission	Amendment
	Article 7 a
	Establishment of fish stock recovery areas
	1. Member States shall establish, by 2020, fish stock recovery areas in which all or certain fishing activities are prohibited
	2. Member States shall establish areas referred to in paragraph 1 on the basis of best scientific advice available with regard to i.a. nursery and spawning grounds for fish stocks targeted by fishing activities to be prohibited and shall notify the Commission of these areas.

3. If a fishing vessel is transiting through a fish stock recovery area, it shall ensure that all gears carried on board that are used for fishing for the species to which the recovery area applies are lashed and stowed, during the transit.

4. Member States having a direct fishing interest in the areas to be affected by measures referred to in paragraph 1 shall cooperate with one another in accordance with Article 21 paragraph 1a[1]. Any of such Member States may request that measures referred to in paragraph 1 are adopted by the Commission.

5. When acting upon the request referred to in paragraph 8, the Commission shall receive from the requesting Member State and other Member States having a direct fishing interest all relevant information on the measures required, including rationale, scientific data and detail on practical implementation. The Commission shall adopt the measures taking into account any relevant scientific advice available to it

Justification

Prohibited areas need to be established in accordance with the best scientific advice available for concrete areas, in relation to concrete fish species and/or fishing methods. Otherwise their conservation added value is questionable. Percentage targets to be achieved may not be compliant with such scientific advice and should thus be deleted. The date in paragraph 1 refers to the necessity of achieving good environmental status by 2020 as required by the Maritime Strategy Framework Directive. Many areas biologically important for fish stocks are found outside territorial waters, so the proposal should not be restricted to them. Focusing on territorial waters only would be a significant discrimination against small-scale fisheries, which operates close to the coast. The text should contain a cooperation mechanism for directly affected Member States, based on regionalization and involving Commission legislation where necessary.

Amendment 1107
Luis Manuel Capoulas Santos

Proposal for a regulation

Text proposed by the Commission	Amendment
	Article 7 A
	Establishment of fish stock recovery areas
	1. In order to secure the reversal of the collapse of the fishing sector, and to conserve living aquatic resources and marine ecosystems, and as part of a precautionary approach, Member States may establish a coherent network of fish stock recovery areas in which all fishing activities are prohibited, including areas important for fish productivity, in particular nursery grounds, spawning grounds and feeding grounds for fish stocks.
	2. Member States may identify and designate as many areas as are necessary to establish a coherent network of fish stock recovery areas in territorial waters in each Member State and shall notify the Commission of these areas. The establishment of the network shall be gradual;
	3. The location of fish stock recovery areas may be modified, as justified by the best available scientific advice;
	4. The measures and decisions referred to paragraph 2 and 3 above shall be notified to the Commission, along with the scientific, technical, social and legal reasons for them and shall be made publicly available;
	5. The competent authorities of the Member States concerned shall decide whether the fish stock recovery areas designated under paragraphs 1, 2 and 3, shall be surrounded by a zone or zones in which fishing activities are restricted and shall decide, after having notified the Commission, on the fishing gears that may be used in those zones, as well as the appropriate management measures and technical rules to be applied therein, which cannot be less stringent than those of Union law. This information shall be made publicly available;

6. If a fishing vessel is transiting through a fish stock recovery area, it shall ensure that all gears carried on board that are used for fishing are lashed and stowed, during the transit;

7. The Union shall also take measures to reduce the possible negative social and economic consequences of the establishment of fish stock recovery areas.

	Article 7 a
	Establishment of exclusive fishing areas
	1. In order to secure the maintenance of the fishing sector, and to conserve dynamic and valuable marine ecosystems, Member States shall establish a coherent network of exclusive fishing areas in which all activities with a potential to impact upon fishing and the stocks on which the industry depend are prohibited. Such areas will be identified on the basis of historic fishing data since 2002.
	2. Member States shall identify and designate as many areas as are necessary to establish a coherent network of exclusive fishing areas amounting to between 20 % and 30 % of territorial waters in each Member State and shall notify the Commission of these areas. The establishment of the network shall be gradual, in accordance with the following timeframe:

(a) By ...*:

-Exclusive fishing areas shall amount to at least 10 % of the territorial waters of each Member State

(b) By ...:

- Exclusive fishing shall amount to at least 20 % of the territorial waters of each Member State

3. The location of exclusive fishing areas shall not be modified within the first five years of their establishment. If a modification is needed, this shall only occur after the establishment of another area or areas of the same dimensions;

4. The measures and decisions referred to paragraph 2 and 3 above shall be notified to the Commission, along with the scientific, technical, social and legal reasons for them and shall be made publicly available;

5. The competent authorities of the Member States concerned shall decide whether the exclusive fishing areas designated under paragraphs 1, 2 and 3, shall be surrounded by a zone or zones in which fishing activities are further protected and shall decide, after having notified the Commission, on the fishing gears that may be used in those zones, as well as the appropriate management measures and technical rules to be applied therein, which cannot be less stringent than those of Union law. 	(a) owing to data gaps, proxy standards in accordance with Commission Decision 2010/477/EU on criteria and methodological standards on good environmental status of marine waters for the Marine Strategy Framework Directive (Directive 2008/56/EC) may be adopted and fishing mortality shall be further reduced on a precautionary basis. Member States and the Commission shall evaluate and address research and knowledge barriers to ensure that additional information will become available as soon as possible.
	(b) owing to the severe depletion of the stock, additional management measures shall be introduced in the context of multiannual plans, including but not limited to a further reduction in fishing mortality, closed areas and closed seasons, with a view to restore and maintain population above levels capable of producing the maximum sustainable yield as soon as biologically possible and by 2020 at the latest.
	(c) owing to the mixed nature of the fishery, the management shall be guided

Justification

Multiannual plans are essential for a sustainable and long-term management of EU fish stocks. But Council is deliberately blocking all multiannual plans. Or. en

Justification

The precautionary approach must be applied in practice, in particular in the setting of fishing opportunities because in cases of uncertainty, a stock may easily become overexploited and collapse. The originally proposed wording in Article 9 (4) with regard to taking into account the limitations of data and sources of uncertainty undermines the precautionary principle, whereby if scientific evidence is uncertain, the EU is obliged to act more cautiously, but an absence of adequate scientific information cannot be used as an excuse for not taking action.

Or. en

Justification

Reliable stock assessment is essential to managing stock in a sustainable manner. Likewise where insufficient data is available there must be mechanisms put in place to resolve this issue by improving data collection and where poor data is not the problem to fund appropriate innovative ways to deal with the problem.

Justification

A "fall-back" deadline is necessary to anticipate the situation where MSY objectives are not achieved by the primary deadline of 2015. Without such a contingency plan, if the first deadline is missed (because stocks are so depleted the recovery has been biologically impossible), there will be a vacuum in the rules, with the practical effect that stocks may not be managed to end overfishing at all.
