(Text with EEA relevance)

THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND THE COUNCIL OF THE EUROPEAN UNION,

Whereas:

(1) Directive (EU) 2015/849 of the European Parliament and the Council³ constitutes the main legal instrument in the prevention of the use of the Union's financial system for the purposes of money laundering and terrorist financing. That Directive, which is to be transposed by 26 June 2017, sets out an updated, transparent, efficient and comprehensive legal framework to address the collection of money or property for terrorist purposes by requiring Member States to identify, understand, mitigate and prevent risks related to money laundering and terrorist financing.

(2) Recent terrorist attacks have brought to light emerging new trends, in particular regarding the way terrorist groups finance and conduct their operations. Certain modern technology services are becoming more and more popular as alternative financial systems and remain outside the scope of Union legislation or benefit from exemptions that may no longer be justified. In order to keep pace with evolving trends, further measures should be taken to ensure increased transparency of financial transactions and of corporate entities under the preventive legal framework in place in the Union, with a view to improving the existing preventive framework and countering the terrorist financing more effectively. It is important to note that the measures taken must be proportionate to the risks.

(2a) The United Nations (UN), Interpol and Europol have been reporting for years on the increasing convergence between organised crime and terrorism. Given the increased convergence between organised crime and terrorism, fighting against organised crime networks should be part of any strategy in the fight against the terrorist financing. Illicit trade in firearms, drugs, cigarettes and counterfeit goods, trade in human beings, racketeering and extortion have become very lucrative ways for terrorist groups to obtain funding, generating around 110 billion euros every year (without trade in counterfeit goods). The nexus between terrorism and organised crime and the links between criminal and terrorist groups constitute an increased security threat to the Union.

(2b) Also money laundering, illicit trade in goods, including but not limited to crude oil, narcotics, works of art, weapons and protected species, serious tax fraud and tax evasion of illegally acquired money are typically committed in respect of the terrorist financing. Without prejudice to [the new anti-terrorism directive] Member States should take the necessary measures to criminalize these behaviours and to make sure that terrorists and terrorist organisations cannot benefit from profits resulting from those criminal activities.

(3) While the aims of Directive (EU) 2015/849 should be pursued, any amendments to that Directive should be consistent with the Union's ongoing action in the field of countering terrorism and terrorism financing, with due regard for the fundamental rights and principles recognised in the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, as well as the observance and application of the proportionality principle. The European Agenda on Security identified as a priority for the upgrading of the EU legal framework to combat terrorism, indicating the need for measures to address terrorist financing in a more effective and comprehensive manner, highlighting that infiltration of financial markets allows terrorism financing. The European Council conclusions of 17-18 December 2015 also stressed the need to take rapidly further action against terrorist finance in all domains.

(4) The Commission has adopted an Action Plan to further step up the fight against the financing of terrorism\(^1\) which underscores the need to adapt to new threats and to amend Directive (EU) 2015/849 to that effect.

(5) Union measures must also accurately reflect developments and commitments undertaken at international level. Therefore, UN Security Council Resolution 2195 (2014) on links between terrorism and transnational organised crime, Resolution 2199 (2015) on preventing terrorist groups from gaining access to international financial institutions and Resolution 2253 (2015) expanding Sanctions Framework to Include Islamic State in Iraq and Levant should be taken into account.

(5a) Money laundering activities are carried out by making large use of cash transactions. The spread and the use of on-line bank accounts and other similar payments systems has largely increased in recent years, implying that there is scope to consider adopting a limit to cash transfers at EU level, without imposing a strong burden on households and firms. The Commission should assess the size of a maximum threshold of cash transfers to be adopted at EU level, leaving to Member States the choice to impose lower thresholds. The assessment should be carried out within 2 years from the date of entry into force of this Directive. Policies and actions in other relevant areas of Union competence, for instance in international trade and development cooperation, should be utilised, where possible, to complement the work to fight money laundering and terrorist financing through the financial system. Those policies and actions should seek to complement and not undermine other policy goals of the Union.

(6) Providers of exchange services between virtual currencies and fiat currencies (that is to say currencies declared to be legal tender) as well as custodian wallet providers for virtual currencies are under no obligation to identify suspicious activity. Terrorist groups are thus able to transfer money into the Union's financial system or within virtual currency networks by concealing transfers or by benefiting from a certain degree of anonymity on those platforms. It is therefore essential to extend the scope of Directive (EU) 2015/849 so as to include virtual currency exchange platforms and custodian wallet providers. Competent authorities should be able to monitor the use of virtual currencies. This would provide a balanced and proportional approach, safeguarding technical advances and the high degree of transparency attained in the field of alternative finance and social entrepreneurship.

(7) The credibility of virtual currencies will not rise if they are used for criminal purposes. In this context, anonymity will become more a hindrance than an asset for virtual currencies taking up and their potential benefits to spread. The inclusion of virtual exchange platforms and custodian wallet providers will not entirely address the issue of anonymity attached to virtual currency transactions, as a large part of the virtual currency environment will remain anonymous because users can also transact without exchange platforms or custodian wallet providers. To combat the risks related to the anonymity, national Financial Intelligence Units (FIUs) should be able to associate virtual currency addresses to the identity of the owner of virtual currencies. In addition, the possibility to allow users to self-declare to designated authorities on a voluntary basis should be further assessed.

(8) Local currencies (also known as complementary currencies) that are used in very limited networks such as a city or a region and among a small number of users should not be considered as virtual currencies.

(9) When dealing with natural persons or legal entities established in high-risk third countries, Member States must require obliged entities to apply enhanced customer due diligence measures to manage and mitigate risks. Each Member State therefore determines at national level the type of enhanced due diligence measures to be taken towards high-risk third countries. Those different approaches between Member States create weak spots on the management of business relationships involving high risk third countries identified by the Commission. Those gaps can be exploited by terrorists to channel funds in and out the Union financial system. It is important to improve the effectiveness of the list of high-risk third countries established by the Commission by providing for a harmonised treatment of those countries at Union level. This harmonised approach should primarily focus on enhanced customer due diligence measures. Nevertheless, Member States and obliged entities should be allowed to apply additional mitigating measures in addition to enhanced customer due diligence measures, in accordance with international obligations. International organisations and standard setters with competence in the field of preventing money laundering and combating terrorist financing may call to apply appropriate countermeasures to protect the international financial system from the on-going and substantial money laundering and terrorist financing risks emanating from countries. Member States should enact and apply additional mitigating measures regarding high risk third countries identified by the Commission by taking into account calls for countermeasures and recommendations such as those expressed by the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) and responsibilities resulting from international agreements. Besides counter measures taken towards high-risk third countries, a comprehensive assessment of AML/CFT regime in place in EEA countries and third countries should constitute a necessary condition for granting passporting and equivalence for the access to the internal market. Access to the internal market might be generally limited, or limited with respect to certain sectors and obliged entities, when weaknesses in the AML/CFT regime are identified.

(9a) Both the Union and its Member States, on the one hand, and third countries, on the other hand, share a responsibility in the fight against money laundering and the terrorist financing. Cooperation with third countries should also further focus on strengthening the financial systems and administrations of developing countries to allow them to better participate in the global process of tax reform, in order to deter financial crime and related illicit activities, and to implement anti-laundering mechanisms that would contribute to a better exchange of data and information with other countries in order to identify fraud and terrorists.
Given the evolving nature of ML/TF threats and vulnerabilities, the Union should adopt an integrated approach on the compliance of national AML/CFT regimes with the requirements at Union level, by taking into consideration an effectiveness assessment of those national regimes. For the purpose of monitoring the correct transposition of the Union requirements in the national regimes, their effective implementation and their capacity to accomplish a strong preventive regime in the field, the Commission should base its assessment on the national risk regimes, which shall be without prejudice to those conducted by international organisations and standards setters with competence in the field of preventing money laundering and combating terrorist financing, such as the FATF or Committee of Experts on the Evaluation of Anti-Money Laundering Measures (MONEYVAL). International organisations and standards setters with competence in the field of preventing money laundering and combating terrorist financing should work in close cooperation with Member States in order to establish a set of common indicators for assessing national risk regimes, as well as harmonized preventive measures.

The monitoring of the transposition of Union requirements in national regimes is not sufficient to ensure that national AML/CFT regimes are effective to tackle AML/CFT activities, since shortcomings often stem from the ineffective enforcement of the rules. In this respect, it is crucial for the internal market that the Commission and the ESAs have additional powers to evaluate the consistency of national AML/CFT regimes with the Union framework monitoring implementation and enforcement of national rules. ESAs shall be assigned additional powers in the field of AML/CFT, including the powers to carry out onsite assessments in Member States competent authorities, compel the production of any information that is relevant to assessing compliance, issue recommendations for remedial action, make those recommendations public and take measures that are necessary to ensure that their recommendations are effectively implemented;

Money laundering and tax evasion are increasingly channelled through trade transactions, by means of price, quantity or quality manipulation. Financial and tax transparency are top priorities of the Union trade policy and that, therefore, countries tolerating money laundering and tax evasion should not be granted any trade privilege with the Union.

In line with the “Trade for All” strategy, further effective action should be taken concerning trade in services to prevent it from being used for illicit financial flows, bearing in mind that free trade in goods and services with developing countries increases the threat of money laundering, and that the Union’s trade in services with tax havens is six times larger than with comparable countries, whereas no such differences exists in trade in goods.

Within a year from the entry into force of this Directive, the Commission should provide a report to Member States on possible loopholes in the chapters on financial services and establishment in Union trade agreements with third countries already in force, in particular the definition of investment and establishment, scope and time limits of prudential carve outs, the existence or non-existence of ceilings for money transfer between parties of the trade agreements, currencies allowed for this transfer, confirmation of bank secret and the existence of provisions on data exchange.

(10e) The chapters on financial services and establishment in future trade agreements should contain narrow definitions of investment, so as to exclude products which have a high potential to carry undeclared money; provide for the establishment of public ultimate beneficial ownership registers of companies, trusts and similar legal arrangements created, administered or operated in the territories the trade agreement comprises; include arrangements on cooperation in the control of financial flows and lifting the bank secret, in accordance with data protection rules and open data standards; enlarge scope and time limits for prudential carve-outs beyond "imbalance of payments necessities", and replace "best endeavour" commitments by compulsory provisions.

(11) General purpose prepaid cards, which are considered to have a social value, have legitimate uses and constitute an instrument contributing to financial inclusion. However, anonymous prepaid cards are easy to use in financing terrorist attacks and logistics. It is therefore essential to deny terrorists, terrorist organizations, terrorism sponsors and other intermediaries and facilitators these means of financing their operations, by further reducing the limits and maximum amounts under which obliged entities are allowed not to apply certain customer due diligence measures provided by Directive (EU) 2015/849. Thus, while having due regard to consumers' needs in using general purpose prepaid instruments and not preventing the use of such instruments for promoting social and financial inclusion, it is essential to lower the existing thresholds for general purpose anonymous prepaid cards.

(12) While the use of anonymous prepaid cards issued in the Union is essentially limited to the Union territory only, that is not always the case with similar cards issued in third countries. It is therefore important to ensure that anonymous prepaid cards issued outside the Union can be used in the Union only where they can be considered to comply with requirements equivalent to those set out in Union legislation. The rule should be enacted in full compliance with Union obligations in respect of international trade, especially the provisions of the General Agreement on Trade in Services.

(13) FIUs play an important role in identifying the financial operations of terrorist networks, especially across borders, and in detecting their financial backers. Financial investigations may be fundamental in uncovering the facilitation of terrorist offences and the networks and schemes of terrorist organisations. Due to a lack of prescriptive international standards, FIUs maintain significant differences as regards their functions, competences and powers. Member States should endeavour to ensure a more efficient and coordinated approach to deal with financial investigations, including those related to the misuse of virtual currencies, into terrorism. The current differences should however not affect an FIU's activity, particularly its capacity to develop preventive analyses in support of all the authorities in charge of intelligence, investigative and judicial activities, and international cooperation. FIUs should have access to information and be able to exchange it without impediments, including through appropriate cooperation with law enforcement authorities. In all cases of suspected criminality and, in particular, in cases involving terrorism financing, information should flow directly and quickly without undue delays.
therefore essential to further enhance FIUs' effectiveness and efficiency, by clarifying the powers of and cooperation between FIUs.

(13a) In order to overcome the current cooperation difficulties which exist between national FIUs, a Union FIU should be set up in order to coordinate, assist and support Member States FIUs in cross-border cases. It would also be particularly suited to an integrated Union financial market and effective in combating money laundering and terrorist financing in the internal market. The Member States FIU would still be primarily responsible for receiving suspicious transaction reports, analysing them and disseminating them to the national competent authority. The Union FIU would lend support to those Member States especially in maintaining and developing the technical infrastructure for ensuring the exchange of information, assisting them in joint analysis of cross border cases and strategic analysis, and coordinate the work of Member States FIUs for cross-border cases.

(14) FIUs should be able to obtain from any obliged entity all the necessary information relating to their functions. Unfettered access to information is essential to ensure that flows of money can be properly traced and illicit networks and flows detected at an early stage. When FIUs need to obtain additional information from obliged entities based on a suspicion of money laundering, such suspicion may be triggered by a prior suspicious transaction report reported to the FIU, but also through other means such as FIU's own analysis, intelligence provided by competent authorities or information held by another FIU. FIUs should therefore be able to obtain the financial, administrative and law enforcement information they need to perform their duties properly from any obliged entity, even without a prior report being made by the individual obliged entity. A FIU should also be able to obtain such information on a request made by another Union FIU and to exchange the information with the requesting FIU.

(14a) Competent authorities supervising credit and financial institutions for compliance with this Directive should be able to cooperate and exchange confidential information, regardless of their respective nature or status. To this end, such competent authorities should have an adequate legal basis for exchanging confidential information and cooperate to the widest extent possible, consistent with the applicable international standards in this field.

(14b) Information of a prudential nature relating to credit and financial institutions, such as information relating to fit and properness of directors and shareholders, the internal control mechanisms, the governance or the compliance and risk management, is often indispensable for an adequate AML/CFT supervision of such institutions. Vice-versa, AML/CFT information is also important for the prudential supervision of these institutions. Therefore, exchange of confidential information and collaboration between AML/CFT competent authorities of credit and financial institutions and prudential supervisors should not be hampered unintentionally by legal uncertainty which may stem from a lack of explicit provisions in this field. Such clarification of the legal framework is even more important since prudential supervision has, in a number of cases, been entrusted to non-AML/CFT supervisors, such as the European Central Bank.
(15) Delayed access to information by FIUs and other competent authorities on the identity of holders of bank and payment accounts and safe deposit boxes, especially anonymous ones hampers the detection of transfers of funds relating to terrorism. National data allowing the identification of bank and payments accounts and safe deposit boxes belonging to one person is fragmented and therefore not accessible to FIUs and other competent authorities in a timely manner. It is therefore essential to establish centralised automated mechanisms, such as a register or data retrieval system in all Member States as an efficient means to get timely access to information on the identity of holders of bank and payment accounts and safe deposit boxes, their proxy holders, and their beneficial owners.

(15a) Information on holding and control of immovable property such as buildings and land are not available in all Member States nor do consolidated data exist on life insurance beneficiaries. Money laundering activities are carried out also by relying on real estate transactions and through life insurance products. The establishment of central automated mechanisms, such as a register or a data retrieval system, in all Member States is essential to track this information and to support the investigation phase. Member States authorities need to have timely access to this data in order to proceed with cross-border checks and inquiries.

(15b) In view of the constant technological changes that make money laundering and the funding of terrorism possible, it is proposed that a Union monitoring, coordination and technological intelligence instrument be created, to assist the various FIUs in their work.

(16) In order to respect privacy and protect personal data, such registries should store the minimum data necessary to the performance of AML investigations. The concerned data subjects should be informed that their data are recorded and accessible by FIUs and should be given a contact point for exercising their rights of access and rectification. The maximum retention periods should be set for the registration of personal data in registries and provide for their destruction once the information is no longer needed for the stated purpose. Access to the registries and databases should be limited on a need to know basis.

(17) Accurate identification and verification of data of natural and legal persons is essential for fighting money laundering or terrorist financing. Latest technical developments in the digitalisation of transactions and payments enable a secure remote or electronic identification, those means of identification as set out in Regulation (EU) No 910/2014 of the European Parliament and of the Council and any other remote identification means based on new technologies presenting an adequate level of security equivalent to the substantial assurance level of e-IDAS, should be taken into account, in particular with regard to notified electronic identification schemes and means that offer high level secure tools and provide a benchmark against which assessing the identification methods set up at national level may be checked. Therefore, it is essential to recognise secure electronic copies of original documents as well as electronic assertions, attestations or credentials as valid means of identity. The principle of technology neutrality should be taken into account in the application of this Directive.
(17a) The European Union Agency for Network and Information Security (ENISA) is the Union centre of network and information security expertise, and ENISA should be empowered to exchange information with law enforcement authorities without impediment in order to enable cyber security cooperation, which plays an important role in fighting against the financing of criminal activities, including terrorism.

(17b) The European Banking Authority (EBA) should be called upon to update its transparency exercise to face today’s challenges in order to better prevent the use of financial systems for the purpose of money laundering or terrorist financing.

(18) The beneficial ownership threshold set out in Article 3(6)(a) of Directive (EU) 2015/849 does not distinguish between genuine commercial corporate entities and those that have no active business and are mostly used as an intermediary structure between the assets or income and the ultimate beneficial owner. For the latter, the set threshold is easily circumvented, leading to no identification of the natural persons who ultimately own or control the legal entity. In order to better clarify beneficial ownership information as regards intermediary structures that adopt a corporate form, it is necessary to establish a specific threshold from which indication of ownership is inferred. That threshold should be low enough to cover most situations.

(19) The approach for the review of existing customers in the current framework relies on a risk-based approach. However, given the higher risk for money laundering, terrorist financing and associated predicate offenses associated with some intermediary structures, that approach may not allow the timely detection and assessment of risks. It is therefore important to ensure that certain clearly specified categories of already existing customers are also monitored on a methodical basis.

(20) Member States are currently required to ensure that legal entities incorporated within their territory obtain and hold adequate, accurate and current information on their beneficial ownership. The need for accurate and up-to-date information on the beneficial owner is a key factor in tracing criminals who might otherwise be able to hide their identity behind a corporate structure. The globally interconnected financial system makes it simple to hide and move funds around the world, and money launderers and terrorist financiers as well as other criminals have increasingly made use of that possibility.

(21) The specific factor determining the Member State responsible for the monitoring and registration of beneficial ownership information of trusts and similar legal arrangements should be clarified. In order to avoid that, due to differences in the legal systems of Member States, certain trusts and similar legal arrangements are not monitored or registered anywhere in the Union, and to avoid distorting the internal market all trusts and similar legal arrangements, including inter alia Treuhand, Stiftung, Privatstiftung, Usufruct Fiducia should be registered in the Member State(s) where they are created, administered or operated. They should be obliged to publicly disclose certain beneficial ownership information. In order to ensure the effective monitoring and registration of information on the beneficial ownership of trusts and similar legal arrangements, cooperation and exchange of relevant information among Member States is also necessary.
(21a) Criminals move illicit proceeds through numerous financial intermediaries to avoid detection, therefore it is important to allow financial and credit institutions to exchange information not only between group members, but also other financial and credit institutions, provided that data protection is ensured.

(22) Public access by way of compulsory disclosure of certain information on the beneficial ownership of companies, trusts and other entities and legal arrangements provides additional guarantees to third parties wishing to do business with those companies. Certain Member States have taken steps or announced their intention to make information contained in registers of beneficial ownership available to the public. The fact that not all Member States would make information publicly available or differences in the information made available and its accessibility may lead to different levels of protection of third parties in the Union. In a well-functioning internal market, there is a need for coordination to avoid distortions. Therefore, such information should be publicly available in all the Member States.

(23) Public access also allows greater scrutiny of information by civil society, including by the press or civil society organisations, and contributes to preserving trust in the integrity of business transactions and of the financial system. It can contribute to combating the misuse of legal entities and legal arrangements both by helping investigations and through reputational effects, given that anyone who could enter into transactions with them is aware of the identity of the beneficial owners. It also facilitates the timely and efficient availability of information for financial institutions as well as authorities, including authorities of third countries, involved in the fight against these offences.

(24) Confidence in financial markets from investors and the general public depends in large part on the existence of an accurate disclosure regime that provides transparency in the beneficial ownership and control structures of companies. This is particularly true for corporate governance systems that are characterized by concentrated ownership, such as the one in the Union. On the one hand, large investors with significant voting and cash-flow rights may encourage long-term growth and firm performance. On the other hand, however, controlling beneficial owners with large voting blocks may have incentives to divert corporate assets and opportunities for personal gain at the expense of minority investors.

(25) Member States should therefore allow access to beneficial ownership information in a sufficiently coherent and coordinated way, through the central registers in which beneficial ownership information is set out, by establishing a clear rule of public access, so that third parties are able to ascertain, throughout the Union, who are the beneficial owners of companies. It is therefore necessary to amend Directive 2009/101/EC of the European Parliament and the Council in order to harmonise the national provisions on disclosure of information on the beneficial ownership of companies, particularly for the purpose of protecting the interests of third parties.

1 Directive 2009/101/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 16 September 2009 on coordination of safeguards which, for the protection of the interests of members and third parties, are required by Member States of companies within the meaning of the second paragraph of Article 48 of the Treaty, with a view to making such safeguards equivalent (OJ L 258, 1.10.2009, p. 11).
A fair balance should be sought in particular between the general public interest in corporate transparency and in the prevention of money laundering and the data subjects' fundamental rights. The set of data to be made available to the public should be limited, clearly and exhaustively defined, and should be of a general nature, so as to minimize the potential prejudice to the beneficial owners. At the same time, information made accessible to the public should not significantly differ from the data currently collected. In order to limit the interference with the right to respect for their private life in general and to protection of their personal data in particular, that information should relate essentially to the status of beneficial owners of businesses and trusts, and should strictly concern the sphere of economic activity in which the beneficial owners operate.

The disclosure of beneficial ownership information should be designed to give governments and regulators the opportunity to respond quickly to alternative investment techniques, such as cash-settled equity derivatives. On the other hand, legitimate majority shareholding should not be deterred from taking an active role in monitoring management in listed companies. For the functioning of financial markets that have become increasingly internationally-oriented and complex, it is essential that legal rules and requirements that enable information sharing on an international level be available and effectively implemented by national supervisory authorities.

The personal data of beneficial owners should be publicly disclosed in order to enable third parties and civil society at large to know who the beneficial owners are. The enhanced public scrutiny will contribute preventing the misuse of legal entities and legal arrangements, including tax avoidance. Therefore, it is essential that this information remains publicly available through the national registers and through the system of interconnection of registers for 10 years after the company has been struck off from the register. However, Member States should be able to provide by law for the processing of the information on beneficial ownership, including personal data for other purposes if such processing meets an objective of public interest and constitutes a necessary and proportionate measure in a democratic society to the legitimate aim pursued.

Moreover, with the same aim of ensuring a proportionate and balanced approach and to guarantee the rights to private life and personal data protection, Member States should provide for exemptions to the disclosure of and to the access to beneficial ownership information in the registers, in exceptional circumstances, where the information would expose the beneficial owner to the risk of fraud, kidnapping, blackmail, violence or intimidation.

2 Regulation (EU) 2016/679 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 27 April 2016 on the protection of natural persons with regard to the processing of personal data and on the free
As a consequence, natural persons whose personal data are held in the national registers as beneficial ownership information should be informed of the publication of their personal data before that publication takes place. Furthermore, only the personal data that is up to date and corresponds to the actual beneficial owners should be made available and the beneficiaries should be informed about their rights under the current Union legal data protection framework, as set out in Regulation (EU) 2016/679 and Directive (EU) 2016/680\(^1\), and the procedures applicable for exercising these rights.

This Directive is without prejudice to the protection of personal data processed by competent authorities in accordance with Council Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA\(^2\), which will be replaced by Directive (EU) 2016/680 of the European Parliament and of the Council\(^3\).

Currently, companies and similar legal entities active in the Union are under an obligation to register their beneficial ownership information, whereas the same obligation does not apply to all trusts and other legal arrangements which present similar characteristics such as Treuhand, fiducies or fideicomiso set up in the Union. Member States are called upon to review which legal arrangements in their legal framework have a structure and function similar to trusts. With a view to ensure that the beneficial owners of all legal entities and legal arrangements operating in the Union are properly identified and monitored under a coherent and equivalent set of conditions, rules regarding the registration of the beneficial ownership information of trusts by their trustees should be consistent with those in place in respect of the registration of beneficial ownership information of companies.

With a view to ensure a coherent and efficient registration and information exchange, Member States should ensure that their authority in charge of the register set up for the beneficial ownership information of trusts and other legal arrangements similar to trusts cooperates with its counterparts in other Member States, sharing information concerning trusts and other similar legal arrangements to trusts.

It is important to ensure that anti-money laundering and terrorist financing rules are correctly implemented by obliged entities. In that context, Member States should

\(^1\) Directive (EU) 2016/680 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 27 April 2016 on the protection of natural persons with regard to the processing of personal data by competent authorities for the purposes of the prevention, investigation, detection or prosecution of criminal offences or the execution of criminal penalties, and on the free movement of such data, and repealing Council Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA \((\text{OJ L 119, 4.5.2016, p. 89})\).

\(^3\) Directive (EU) 2016/680 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 27 April 2016 on the protection of natural persons with regard to the processing of personal data by competent authorities for the purposes of the prevention, investigation, detection or prosecution of criminal offences or the execution of criminal penalties, and on the free movement of such data, and repealing Council Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA \((\text{OJ L 119, 4.5.2016, p. 89})\).
strengthen the role of public authorities acting as competent authorities with designated responsibilities for combating money laundering or terrorist financing, including the FIUs, the authorities that have the function of investigating or prosecuting money laundering, associated predicate offences and terrorist financing, and seizing or freezing and confiscating criminal assets, as well as anti-corruption authorities, tax authorities, authorities receiving reports on cross-border transportation of currency and bearer-negotiable instruments and authorities that have supervisory or monitoring responsibilities aimed at ensuring compliance by obliged entities.

(37a) Regardless of their nature or status, competent authorities supervising credit and financial institutions for compliance with this Directive should be able to cooperate and exchange confidential information in this context. For this reason, an adequate legal basis is needed to allow such competent authorities to exchange confidential information and cooperate to the widest extent possible. In addition, prudential information gathered via the supervision of credit and financial institutions will often prove indispensable for an adequate AML/CFT supervision of such institutions and vice-versa. Therefore, exchange of confidential information and cooperation between AML/CFT competent authorities of credit and financial institutions and prudential supervisors should not be hampered by legal uncertainty which may follow from a lack of explicit provisions in this field.

(37b) Existing data included in the Eurostat special report on anti-money laundering show that the number of suspicious transaction reports submitted varies significantly across Member States and obliged entities. Data collection needs to be improved with the objective of extending data coverage and enable the information are updated. Member States shall submit to Eurostat statistics on AML to allow the European Statistical office to publish every two years a report summarising and explaining these statistics.

(37c) Key transparency standards should be binding and guide the negotiation and renegotiation of Union trade agreements and partnerships. Trade partners should lose the benefits granted by trade agreements with the Union where they fail to respect relevant international standards, such as the Common Reporting Standard of the OECD, the Action Plan on Base Erosion and Profit Shifting of the OECD, the central register of beneficial ownership and FATF recommendations. In the framework of the implementation of the OECD BEPS, it is essential to fully apply the country by country reporting system for multinational enterprises.

(37d) A relatively large number of suspicious transactions reports are submitted by credit institutions whereas very few or almost no suspicious transactions reports are submitted by certain other obliged entities, in particular the different types of professional advisers, lawyers and trusts.

(37e) Trade Sustainability Impact Assessments (TSIAs) should contain precise information on the performance of the respective third country or countries in this respect, including implementation of the relevant legislation. Strengthening good governance clauses in bilateral agreements with third countries and providing them with technical assistance should be a key element of those agreements, even when such clauses are not binding.
In accordance with the Joint Political Declaration of 28 September 2011 of Member States and the Commission on explanatory documents\(^1\), Member States have undertaken to accompany, in justified cases, the notification of their transposition measures with one or more documents explaining the relationship between the components of a directive and the corresponding parts of national transposition instruments. With regard to this Directive, the legislator considers the transmission of such documents to be justified.

Since the objective of this Directive, namely the protection of the financial system by means of prevention, detection and investigation of money laundering and terrorist financing, cannot be sufficiently achieved by the Member States, as individual measures adopted by Member States to protect their financial systems could be inconsistent with the functioning of the internal market and with the prescriptions of the rule of law and Union public policy, but can rather, by reason of the scale and effects of the action, be better achieved at Union level, the Union may adopt measures, in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity as set out in Article 5 of the Treaty on European Union. In accordance with the principle of proportionality, as set out in that Article, this Directive does not go beyond what is necessary in order to achieve that objective.

This Directive respects the fundamental rights and observes the principles recognised by the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, in particular the right to respect for private and family life (Article 7 of the Charter), the right to the protection of personal data (Article 8 of the Charter), the freedom to conduct a business (Article 16 of the Charter).

Given the need to urgently implement measures adopted with a view to strengthen the Union’s regime set in place for the prevention of money laundering and terrorism financing, and seeing the commitments undertaken by Member States to quickly proceed with the transposition of Directive (EU) 2015/849, this Directive should be transposed by 1 January 2017. For the same reasons, the amendments to Directive (EU) 2015/849 and Directive 2009/101/EC should also be transposed by 1 January 2017.

The European Central Bank delivered an opinion on 12 October 2016\(^2\).

The European Data Protection Supervisor was consulted in accordance with Article 28(2) of Regulation (EC) No 45/2001 of the European Parliament and of the Council\(^3\) [and delivered an opinion on …\(^4\)], Directives (EU) 2015/849 and 2009/101/EC should therefore be amended accordingly.

4. Member States shall ensure that competent authorities supervising credit and financial institutions cooperate with each other to the greatest extent possible, regardless of their respective nature or status. Such cooperation also includes the ability to conduct, within the powers of the requested competent authority, inquiries on behalf of a requesting competent authority, and the subsequent exchange of the information obtained through such inquiries.

5. Member States may conclude cooperation agreements providing for collaboration and exchanges of confidential information with the competent authorities that constitute counterparts of the competent authorities mentioned in paragraph 1. Such cooperation agreements shall be concluded on the basis of reciprocity and only if the information disclosed is subject to guarantees of professional secrecy at least equivalent to those referred to in paragraph 1. Confidential information exchanged according to these cooperation agreements shall be used for the purpose of performing the supervisory task of the authorities mentioned.

Where the information originates in another Member State, it may not be disclosed without the express agreement of the competent authorities which have disclosed it and, where appropriate, solely for the purposes for which those authorities gave their agreement.

(c) the persons with access to the information are subject to professional secrecy requirements under national law at least equivalent to those referred to in Article 57a (1);

(d) where the information originates in another Member State, that it is not disclosed without the express agreement of the competent authorities which have disclosed it and, solely for the purposes for which those authorities gave their agreement.

4. This Subsection shall not prevent the competent authorities supervising credit and financial institutions for compliance with this Directive from transmitting confidential information, for the purposes of their tasks, to other authorities responsible for supervising credit and financial institutions according to other Directives or Regulations, including the European Central Bank acting according to Regulation 1024/2013."

5a. Member States shall require the competent authorities to effectively monitor and to take the necessary measures with a view to ensuring compliance with the requirements of this article. Member states shall ensure that the competent authorities have adequate powers, including the power to compel the production of any information that is relevant to monitoring compliance and perform checks, and have adequate financial, human and technical resources to perform their functions. Member States shall ensure that staff of those authorities maintain high professional standards, including standards of confidentiality and data protection, are of high integrity and appropriately skilled."

OPINION OF THE COMMITTEE ON DEVELOPMENT

for the Committee on Economic and Monetary Affairs and the Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs

Rapporteur: Elly Schlein

SHORT JUSTIFICATION

The Commission has presented to the European Parliament and the Council a proposal aimed at further reinforcing EU rules on anti-money laundering to counter terrorist financing and increase transparency about who really owns companies and trusts, in order to strengthen the fight against tax avoidance.

The Rapporteur welcomes the amendments proposed by the Commission, which represent some positive steps forward on the issue of tax evasion and money laundering. The Panama Papers once again have proven the urgent need for effective rules for the verification of the beneficial ownership of companies and other legal persons. In particular, a huge amount of resources are lost by developing countries due to shady deals and a web of corrupt activities involving the use of anonymous shell companies and trusts.

However, the proposal as it stands still fails to respond with the boldness and urgency that citizens expect. The Rapporteur believes that some serious loopholes remain: not all trusts would have to reveal their so-called beneficial owners (BO)s to the public, and some of them could keep them secret to all but those who can prove ‘legitimate interest’. With respect to companies, the current Directive includes a clause which states that if the beneficial owner cannot be identified then a member of senior management can be named instead. Moreover, although the threshold for beneficial ownership has been reduced from a 25 % ownership stake down to a 10 % stake, such change is fragile since it concerns only ‘passive non-financial entit[ies]’.

While the Rapporteur supports the efforts taken by the Commission, she believes that the European Parliament and the Council need to go further in addressing the shortcomings that risk weakening anti-money laundering and the fight against tax avoidance and tax evasion around the globe. If these loopholes are not closed, developing countries’ authorities will continue to find it difficult to penetrate the corporate veil created by shell companies in Europe in order to recover stolen assets and counter illicit financial flows. The EU should not miss the opportunity to further reinforce EU rules on anti-money laundering and increasing transparency, by also taking into consideration the particular needs of developing countries, which are particularly affected by the plague of illicit financial flows. Policy Coherence for Development invites us to enable developing countries to mobilise their own domestic resources notably through taxation. Only full public disclosure will allow citizens from developing countries to ensure anonymous shell companies are not used to launder away essential resources for development.
AMENDMENTS

The Committee on Development calls on the Committee on Economic and Monetary Affairs and the Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs, as the committees responsible, to take into account the following amendments:

Amendment 1

Proposal for a directive
Recital 9 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(9a) Both the Union and its Member States, on the one hand, and third countries, on the other hand, share a responsibility in the fight against money laundering and the financing of terrorism. Cooperation with third countries should also further focus on strengthening the financial systems and administrations of developing countries to allow them to better participate in the global process of tax reform, in order to deter financial crime and related illicit activities, and to implement anti-laundering mechanisms that would contribute to a better exchange of data and information with other countries in order to identify fraud and terrorists.

Amendment 2

Proposal for a directive
Recital 21

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(21) The specific factor determining the Member State responsible for the monitoring and registration of beneficial ownership information of trusts and similar legal arrangements should be clarified. In order to avoid that, due to differences in the legal systems of Member States, certain trusts are not monitored or registered anywhere in the Union, all trusts and similar legal arrangements should be registered where they are administered. In order to ensure the effective monitoring and registration of information on the beneficial ownership of trusts, cooperation among Member States is also necessary.

Amendment 3

Proposal for a directive
Recital 35

Text proposed by the Commission

(35) In order to ensure proportionality, the beneficial ownership information in respect of any other trusts than those which consist of any property held by, or on behalf of, a person carrying on a business which consists of or includes the management of trusts, and acting as trustee of a trust in the course of that business with a view to gain profit should only be available to parties holding a legitimate interest. The legitimate interest with respect to money laundering, terrorist financing and the associated predicate offences should be justified by readily available means, such as statutes or mission statement of non-governmental organisations, or on the basis of demonstrated previous activities relevant to the fight against money laundering and terrorist financing or associated predicate offences, or a proven track record of surveys or actions in that field.

Amendment 4

Proposal for a directive
Recital 35 a (new)
(35a) While the fight against money laundering and terrorism is a legitimate aim, the measures set out in this Directive should in no way impede the financial inclusion, without discrimination, of all persons within the Union and in third countries.

Amendment 5
Proposal for a directive
Recital 35 b (new)

(35b) Remittances represent an important contribution to family and community development. While recognising the importance of preventing money laundering, measures taken pursuant to this Directive should not impede remittance transfers from international migrants.

Amendment 6
Proposal for a directive
Recital 35 c (new)

(35c) Humanitarian aid is designed to provide aid and assistance to people in need globally and is of the utmost importance. Measures aimed at tackling money laundering, terrorism financing and tax evasion should not prevent persons and organisations from financing such aid for the benefit of people in need.

Amendment 7
Proposal for a directive
Article 1 – point 2 – point -a (new)
Directive (EU) 2015/849
Article 3 – point 6 – point a

Present text

(a) in the case of corporate entities:
(i) the natural person(s) who ultimately owns or controls a legal entity through direct or indirect ownership of a sufficient percentage of the shares or voting rights or ownership interest in that entity, including through bearer shareholdings, or through control via other means, other than a company listed on a regulated market that is subject to disclosure requirements consistent with Union law or subject to equivalent international standards which ensure adequate transparency of ownership information.

Amendment

(-a) in point (6), point (a) is replaced by the following:

‘(a) in the case of corporate entities:
(i) all the natural persons (who cannot be nominees, agents, proxies or equivalent) who ultimately own or control a legal entity through direct or indirect ownership of a sufficient percentage of the shares or voting rights or ownership interest in that entity, including through bearer shareholdings, or through control via other means, other than a company listed on a regulated market that is subject to disclosure requirements consistent with Union law or subject to equivalent international standards which ensure adequate transparency of ownership information.

A shareholding of 25 % plus one share or an ownership interest of more than 25 % in the customer held by a natural person shall be an indication of direct ownership. A shareholding of 25 % plus one share or an ownership interest of more than 25 % in the customer held by a corporate entity, which is under the control of a natural person(s), or by multiple corporate entities, which are under the control of the same natural person(s), shall be an indication of indirect ownership. This applies without prejudice to the right of Member States to decide that a lower percentage may be an indication of ownership or control. Control through other means may be determined, inter alia, in accordance with the criteria in Article 22(1) to (5) of Directive 2013/34/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council (³);

(ii) if, after having exhausted all possible means and provided there are no grounds for suspicion, no person under (ii) if the entity fails to provide the identity of any natural person that meets the criteria under point (i), or if there is point (i) is identified, or if there is any doubt that the person(s) identified are the beneficial owner(s), the natural person(s) who hold the position of senior managing official(s), the obliged entities shall keep records of the actions taken in order to identify the beneficial ownership under point (i) and this point;"

any doubt that the person(s) identified are the beneficial owner(s), the obliged entities shall record that no beneficial owner exists and keep records of the actions taken in order to identify the beneficial ownership under point (i).

In addition, the obliged entities should identify and verify the identity of the relevant natural person who holds the position of senior managing official, who should be identified as 'senior manager' (and not as 'beneficial owner'), and record details of all legal owners of the entity;

Article 3 – point 6 – point b

(b) in the case of trusts:
(i) the settlor;
(ii) the trustee(s);
(iii) the protector, if any;
(iv) the beneficiaries, or where the individuals benefiting from the legal arrangement or entity have yet to be determined, the class of persons in whose main interest the legal arrangement or entity is set up or operates;
(v) any other natural person exercising ultimate control over the trust by means of direct or indirect ownership or by other means;

Amendment

(aa) in point 6, point (b) is replaced by the following:

‘(b) in the case of trusts:
(i) the settlor(s);
(ii) the trustee(s);
(iii) the protector(s) if any;
(iv) the beneficiaries, or where the individuals benefiting from the legal arrangement or entity have yet to be determined, the class of persons in whose main interest the legal arrangement or entity is set up or operates;
(v) any other natural person exercising ultimate control over the trust by means of direct or indirect ownership or by other means.

With regard to trusts that are designated by characteristics or by class, the trust deed or related document should provide sufficient information concerning the beneficiary so that any person would be able to establish the identity of the beneficiary at the time of the distribution or when the beneficiary intends to exercise vested rights.’

Justification

Since a trust may have more than one settlor or protector, beneficial ownership definitions should refer to “settlor(s)” and “protector(s)”, just as it (already) refers to “trustee(s)” and “beneficiary(ies)”. Otherwise, this ambiguity could be exploited to register only one of possibly many settlors or protectors. Plurals for all related parties of a trust are already prescribed by the OECD’s Commentaries to the CRS for automatic exchange of information.

Amendment

(aa) paragraph 5 is replaced by the following:

‘5. Member States shall ensure that the information on the beneficial ownership is accessible in all cases to:

(a) competent authorities and FIUs, without any restriction;

(b) obliged entities, within the framework of customer due diligence in accordance with Chapter II;

(c) the public

The information accessible to the public shall consist of at least the name, the date of birth, the nationality, a business or service address and the country of residence of the beneficial owner as well as the nature and extent of the beneficial interest held.

For the purposes of this paragraph, access to the information on beneficial ownership shall be in accordance with both data protection rules and open data standards.’, information shall not exceed the administrative costs thereof.

Justification

The information in the BO registers should be publicly accessible in an open data format. Requiring member states to create the registers according to open data standards also prevents registers where you can search using only one parameter, such as the company name. Moreover, it immensely facilitates the interconnection of the Member States registers which is due in coming years.

Amendment

Proposal for a directive
Article 1 – point 9 – point c
Directive (EU) 2015/849
Article 30 – paragraph 9

Text proposed by the Commission

“9. In exceptional circumstances to be laid down in national law, where the access referred to in point (b) of paragraph 5 would expose the beneficial owner to the risk of fraud, kidnapping, blackmail, violence or intimidation, or where the beneficial owner is a minor or otherwise incapable, Member States may provide for an exemption from such access to all or part of the information on the beneficial ownership on a case-by-case basis.

Exemptions granted pursuant to this paragraph shall not apply to credit institutions and financial institutions, and to the obliged entities as referred to in point (3)(b) of Article 2(1) that are public officials.

Amendment

“9. In exceptional circumstances to be laid down in national law, where the access referred to in point (b) and (c) of paragraph 5 would expose the beneficial owner to the risk of kidnapping, blackmail, violence or intimidation, in particular when the beneficial owner is a minor or otherwise incapable, Member States may provide for an exemption from such access to all or part of the information on the beneficial ownership on a case-by-case basis. Exemptions shall never be indefinite and shall be reassessed at regular intervals to avoid abuse.

Where an exemption is granted, it must be clearly noted in the register accessible to entities referred to in point (b) and (c) of paragraph 5.

Exemptions granted pursuant to this paragraph shall not apply to credit institutions and financial institutions, and to the obliged entities as referred to in point (3)(b) of Article 2(1) that are public officials.
Justification

The wording could be interpreted in a way that creates an automatic blanket exemption for all companies that have at least one person under a certain age listed as their beneficial owner. The current reference to the risk of fraud could be used to apply for an exemption based entirely on an economic loss. When an exemption is made, it has to be clearly visible in the register available to the public. Moreover, these exemptions should not be granted without any time constraints.

Article 31 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

(a) the settlor;
(b) the trustee;
(c) the protector (if any);
(d) the beneficiaries or class of beneficiaries;
(e) any other natural person exercising effective control of the trust.”;

Amendment

“1. Member States shall ensure that this Article applies to trusts and other types of legal arrangements having a structure or functions similar to trusts, such as, inter alia, fiducie, Treuhand, waqf or fideicomiso, and all other similar, in terms of structure or function, existing or future legal arrangements.

Member States shall require that trustees of any express trust created, administered and/or operating in that Member state obtain and hold adequate, accurate and up-to-date information on beneficial ownership regarding the trust. That information shall include the identity of:

(a) the settlor(s);
(b) the trustee(s);
(c) the protector(s) (if any);
(d) the beneficiaries or class of beneficiaries; and
(e) any other natural person exercising effective control over the trust.”;

Amendment 16

Proposal for a directive
Article 1 – point 10 – point b
Directive (EU) 2015/849
Article 31 – paragraph 3a
Text proposed by the Commission

“3a. The information referred to in paragraph 1 shall be held in a central register set up by the Member State where the trust is administered.”;

Amendment

“3a. The information referred to in paragraph 1 shall be held in a central register set up by the Member State where the trust is created, administered or operates. Member States shall notify to the Commission the characteristics of the national central register.”;

Justification

All current and future legal arrangements that are similar to trusts should be covered. Member States should require registration of all trusts governed under their law or that are administered by an EU resident even if all the other parties of the trust and its assets are not in the EU. This way Member States can ensure that their law or residents are not facilitating money laundering or tax evasion elsewhere in the world, which is particularly important for developing countries.

Amendment 17

Proposal for a directive
Article 1 – point 10 – point d
Directive (EU) 2015/849
Article 31 – paragraph 4 a

Text proposed by the Commission

“4a. The information held in the register referred to in paragraph 3a of this Article with respect to any other trusts than those referred to in Article 7b (b) of Directive (EC) 2009/101 shall be accessible to any person or organisation that can demonstrate a legitimate interest.

The information accessible to persons and organisations that can demonstrate a legitimate interest shall consist of the name, the month and year of birth, the nationality and the country of residence of the beneficial owner as defined in Article 3(6)(b).

Amendment

“4a. The information held in the register referred to in paragraph 3a of this Article shall be accessible to the public in an open data format.

The information accessible to the public shall consist of the name, the date of birth, the nationality and the country of residence of the beneficial owner as defined in Article 3(6)(b), as well as the nature and extent of the beneficial interest held.

Member States shall ensure that, in exceptional circumstances and under specific terms to be laid down in national law, a settlor and/or a trustee may request national authorities not to make that information about the trust or legal arrangement in question publicly accessible, for the purpose of protecting the privacy of vulnerable beneficiaries. Where the national authority agrees to that request, a statement shall be inserted in the public register stating that the available information on the trust or legal arrangement is incomplete. It shall always be possible to challenge such decisions.

Justification

Open data format is crucial in order to prevent hiding of beneficial ownership of trusts: it enables the compilation and analysis of large amounts of data in order to better detect anomalies, patterns, errors, red flags, etc., as well as combine BO data with information from other relevant data sources important for detecting corruption across the value chain, i.e. contracts & procurement processes.

Amendment 18

Proposal for a directive
Article 1 – point 10 – point d
Directive (EU) 2015/849
Article 31 – paragraph 4 b

4b. Whenever entering into a new customer relationship with a trust or other legal arrangement subject to registration of beneficial ownership information pursuant to paragraph 3a, the obliged entities shall collect proof of registration whenever applicable.

Justification

Requiring obliged entities to report on discrepancies between their own CDD and the public BO registers would strengthen the data on the public BO registers. It should also be stressed that obliged entities are not to rely on the information on the BO registers but continue performing their independent customer due diligence in order to know who their customers are.

Directive (EU) 2015/849
Article 31 – paragraph 5

Amendment

(da) paragraph 5 is replaced by the following:

"5. Member States shall require that the information held in the central register referred to in paragraph 4 is adequate, accurate and up-to-date. Member States shall require that the obliged entities report cases of missing or inaccurate disclosures."

Article 31 – paragraph 7a – subparagraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

“In exceptional circumstances laid down in national law, where the access referred to in paragraphs 4 and 4a would expose the beneficial owner to the risk of fraud, kidnapping, blackmail, violence or intimidation, or where the beneficial owner is a minor or otherwise incapable, Member States may provide for an exemption from such access to all or part of the information on the beneficial ownership on a case-by-case basis.

Amendment

“In exceptional circumstances laid down in national law, where the access referred to in paragraphs 4 and 4a would expose the beneficial owner to the risk of kidnapping, blackmail, violence or intimidation, in particular when the beneficial owner is a minor or otherwise incapable, Member States may provide for an exemption from such access to all or part of the information on the beneficial ownership on a case-by-case basis. “10. For the purposes of this Article, a trust is considered to be created, administered or to operate in a Member State when it:

(a) is created according to, or governed by, the law of that Member State or has its ultimate court of appeal in the jurisdiction of that Member State; or

(b) is connected to that Member State by:

(i) having one or more of the beneficial owners of the trust, as defined in Article 3(6)(b), resident in that Member State;

(ii) holding real estate in that Member State;

(iii) holding shares or voting rights or ownership interest in a legal entity incorporated in that Member State; or

(iv) holding a bank or payment account in a credit institution operating in that Member State.”;

Rapporteur: Emmanuel Maurel

AMENDMENTS

The Committee on International Trade calls on the Committee on Economic and Monetary Affairs, and the Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs, as the committees responsible, to take into account the following amendments:

| (5a) Policies and actions in other relevant areas of Union competence, for instance in international trade and development cooperation, should be utilised, where possible, to complement the work to fight money laundering and terrorist financing through the financial system. Those policies and actions should seek to complement and not undermine other policy goals of the Union. | }
Proposal for a directive
Recital 10 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

(10a) Money laundering and tax evasion are increasingly channelled through trade transactions, by means of price, quantity or quality manipulation. Financial and tax transparency are top priorities of the Union trade policy and that, therefore, countries tolerating money laundering and tax evasion should not be granted any trade privilege with the Union.

Amendment 3
Proposal for a directive
Recital 10 b (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

(10b) In line with the “Trade for All” strategy, further effective action should be taken concerning trade in services to prevent it from being used for illicit financial flows, bearing in mind that free trade in goods and services with developing countries increases the threat of money laundering, and that the Union’s trade in services with tax havens is six times larger than with comparable countries, whereas no such differences exists in trade in goods.

Amendment 4
Proposal for a directive
Recital 10 c (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

(10c) Within a year from the entry into force of this Directive, the Commission should provide a report to Member States on possible loopholes in the chapters on financial services and establishment in EU trade agreements with third countries already in force, in particular the definition of investment and establishment, scope and time limits of prudential carve outs, the existence or non-existence of ceilings for money transfer between parties of the trade agreements, currencies allowed for this transfer, confirmation of bank secret and the existence of provisions on data exchange.

Amendment 5
Proposal for a directive
Recital 10 d (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

(10d) Liberalisation of financial services should be subject to a better scrutiny, and to ex-ante analysis by the competent authorities. With regard to the exponential financial innovation, inclusion of financial services in Union trade agreements and partnerships should be based on positive lists.

Amendment 6
Proposal for a directive
Recital 10 e (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

(10e) The chapters on financial services and establishment in future trade agreements should contain narrow definitions of investment, so as to exclude products which have a high potential to carry undeclared money; provide for the establishment of public ultimate beneficial ownership registers of companies, trusts and similar legal arrangements created, administered or operated in the territories the trade agreement comprises; include arrangements on cooperation in the control of financial flows and lifting the bank secret, in accordance with data protection rules and open data standards; enlarge scope and time limits for prudential carve-outs beyond 'imbalance of payments necessities', and replace 'best endeavour' commitments by compulsory provisions.

Amendment 7
Proposal for a directive
Recital 37 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(37a) Key transparency standards should be binding and guide the negotiation and renegotiation of Union trade agreements and partnerships. Trade partners should lose the benefits granted by trade agreements with the Union where they fail to respect relevant international standards, such as the Common Reporting Standard of the OECD, the Action Plan on Base Erosion and Profit Shifting of the OECD, the central register of beneficial ownership and FATF recommendations. In the framework of the implementation of the OECD BEPS, it is essential to fully apply the country by country reporting system for multinational enterprises.

Amendment 8
Proposal for a directive
Recital 37 b (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(37b) Trade Sustainability Impact Assessments (TSIAs) should contain precise information on the performance of the respective third country or countries in this respect, including implementation of the relevant legislation. Strengthening good governance clauses in bilateral agreements with third countries and providing them with technical assistance should be a key element of those agreements, even when such clauses are not binding.

Amendment 9

Proposal for a directive
Recital 37 c (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(37c) Where trade agreements with developing countries exist or are under negotiation, sufficient funds must be earmarked, as part of the agreement, for the creation of technical, human and institutional capacity to carry out the above mentioned requirements. Annual reports on implementation of the trade agreement the Union has concluded with third countries should have a special section on financial services and establishment and contain verifiable information on compliance with the requirements mentioned above.

OPINION OF THE COMMITTEE ON LEGAL AFFAIRS

for the Committee on Economic and Monetary Affairs and the Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs

Rapporteur: Kostas Chrysogonos

SHORT JUSTIFICATION

I. Introduction

The present proposal aims to amend two pieces of recent EU legislation on financial checks and transparency in order to further the fight against money laundering and terrorist financing, which both rely on loopholes in financial controls. In this context, the following five main problems have been identified: 1. suspicious transactions involving high-risk third countries are not efficiently monitored owing to unclear and uncoordinated customer due diligence requirements; 2. suspicious transactions using virtual currencies are not sufficiently monitored by the authorities, which are unable to link identities and transactions; 3. the current measures to mitigate money laundering/terrorist financing risks associated with anonymous prepaid instruments are insufficient; 4. financial intelligence units (FIUs) do not have the timely access to – and do not exchange – information held by obliged entities; 5. FIUs lack access, or have delayed access, to information on the identity of holders of bank and payment accounts.

In this area, it is important to strike the right balance between putting in place sufficient checks to effectively avoid financial crimes and terrorist financing, and protecting privacy and fundamental rights. In recent years, the increasing damage caused by both financial improprieties and terrorist activity has led to a shift in this balance, as stronger measures have been required to protect society as a whole. The question is thus one of balance between these interests, which can conflict to some extent, as well as of proportionality.

II. Regulation of virtual currencies

Virtual currencies are a marginal phenomenon at present, but it is possible that they will become increasingly important. At the same time, it is clear that they can be misused for criminal purposes. The Commission therefore proposes to make virtual currency exchange platforms and custodian wallet providers subject to some of the same reporting obligations as traditional financial service providers. In this framework, national FIUs should be able to associate virtual currency addresses with the identity of the owner of virtual money.

The rapporteur approves of this step, but agrees with the European Central Bank when it states that the introduction of this reporting obligation should not be worded in such a way that it can be seen as an endorsement of virtual currencies.

III. Restrictions on anonymous prepaid cards

Anonymous prepaid cards can be useful means of payment, especially for relatively small amounts. However, they can be used for fraudulent reasons. The Commission proposes to reduce the threshold for payments using such cards without carrying out systematic due diligence checks, as well as end the due diligence check exemption for online payments.

Your rapporteur approves of certain tighter checks on such cards, as there are proven instances of their misuse, but considers that the restrictions must not be so tight that such cards become unusable in practice. Moreover, he considers that the impact of the proposed measures on competitiveness and in particular on SMEs active in the field of prepaid instruments and virtual currencies needs to be more thoroughly examined.

IV. Powers of FIUs to access information

The Commission’s proposal increases the powers of the FIUs of the Member States to request information from financial institutions. Currently, FIUs can only request information if the financial institution in question has alerted them to unusual activity. The proposal therefore permits motu proprio requests by FIUs. Central registries of the holders of bank accounts are also to be set up in the Member States.

The rapporteur considers that the restrictions on financial secrecy are justified in view of the current conditions. The fundamental rights of all parties must in any case be fully respected.

V. Common approach to high-risk third countries

The EU now has a relatively short, common list of high-risk third countries, in relation to

1 See also 'The law enforcement challenges of cybercrime: are we really playing catch up?', Study for the LIBE Committee, Policy Department C, European Parliament, 2015.
which financial transactions should be subject to particular attention. The proposal sets out common standards for dealing with financial transactions to and from those jurisdictions.

The rapporteur considers that such a common approach is necessary.

VI. Access to beneficial ownership information

One of the most important aspects of the proposal concerns increased obligations to declare, and provide access to, information on the beneficial ownership of corporate structures, trusts, and similar arrangements. Many recent financial and political scandals have shown that such arrangements can be a way of avoiding taxes or proper supervision of financial affairs. The proposal aims to give public access to a more comprehensive register containing certain information on the beneficial ownership of corporate structures or trusts, instead of granting access only to certain bodies. Furthermore, the rules on the place of registration of trusts are also clarified.

Your rapporteur considers that this increased transparency is essential in order to maintain public confidence in the financial system. It is particularly important that the threshold for declaring a beneficial interest should be sufficiently low – the Commission’s proposal to lower it from 25% to 10% can be approved.

VII. Conclusion

Your rapporteur considers that this proposal is a timely one, as it is needed in order to reinforce the Union’s legal framework against money laundering and terrorist financing. The main lines of the Commission’s proposal can be approved, with, however, some amendments that aim to further strengthen the combat against money laundering and terrorist financing whilst ensuring respect for fundamental rights in this area.

(2) Recent terrorist attacks have brought to light emerging new trends, in particular regarding the way terrorist groups finance and conduct their operations. Certain modern technology services are becoming more and more popular as alternative financial systems and remain outside the scope of Union legislation or benefit from exemptions that may no longer be justified. In order to keep pace with evolving trends, further measures to improve the existing preventive framework should be taken.

Certain modern technology services are becoming more and more popular as alternative financial systems and remain outside the scope of Union legislation or benefit from exemptions that may no longer be justified. In order to keep pace with evolving trends, further measures should be taken to ensure increased transparency of financial transactions and of corporate entities under the preventive legal framework in place in the Union, with a view to improving the existing preventive framework and countering the financing of terrorism more effectively.

Amendment 3

Recital 3

Text proposed by the Commission

(3) While the aims of Directive (EU) 2015/849 should be pursued, any amendments to that Directive should be consistent with the Union's ongoing action in the field of countering terrorism and terrorism financing. The European Agenda on Security\textsuperscript{25} indicated the need for measures to address terrorist financing in a more effective and comprehensive manner, highlighting that infiltration of financial markets allows terrorism financing. The European Council conclusions of 17-18 December 2015 also stressed the need to take rapidly further action against terrorist finance in all domains.

Amendment

(3) While the aims of Directive (EU) 2015/849 should be pursued, any amendments to that Directive should be consistent with the Union's ongoing action in the field of countering terrorism and terrorism financing, with due regard for the fundamental rights and principles recognised in the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, as well as the observance and application of the proportionality principle. The European Agenda on Security\textsuperscript{25} identified as a priority the upgrading of the EU legal framework to combat terrorism, indicating the need for measures to address terrorist financing in a more effective and comprehensive manner, highlighting that infiltration of financial markets allows terrorism financing. The European Council conclusions of 17-18 December 2015 also stressed the need to take rapidly further action against terrorist finance in all domains.

Amendment 4

Recital 5
(5) Union measures must also accurately reflect developments and commitments undertaken at international level. UN Security Council Resolution 2199 (2015) urges States to prevent terrorist groups from gaining access to international financial institutions.

Amendment

Proposal for a directive

Recital 6

(6) Providers of exchange services between virtual currencies and fiat currencies (that is to say currencies declared to be legal tender) as well as custodian wallet providers for virtual currencies are under no obligation to identify suspicious activity. Terrorist groups are thus able to transfer money into the Union’s financial system or within virtual currency networks by concealing transfers or by benefiting from a certain degree of anonymity on those platforms. It is therefore essential to extend the scope of Directive (EU) 2015/849 so as to include virtual currency exchange platforms and custodian wallet providers. Competent authorities should be able to monitor the use of virtual currencies. This would provide a balanced and proportional approach, safeguarding technical advances and the high degree of transparency attained in the field of alternative finance and social entrepreneurship.

(7) The credibility of virtual currencies will not rise if they are used for criminal purposes. In this context, anonymity will become more a hindrance than an asset for virtual currencies taking up and their potential benefits to spread. The inclusion of virtual exchange platforms and custodian wallet providers will not entirely address the issue of anonymity attached to virtual currency transactions, as a large part of the virtual currency environment will remain anonymous because users can also transact without exchange platforms or custodian wallet providers. To combat the risks related to the anonymity, national Financial Intelligence Units (FIUs) should be able to associate virtual currency addresses to the identity of the owner of virtual currencies. In addition, the possibility to allow users to self-declare to designated authorities on a voluntary basis should be further assessed.

(See the opinion of the European Central Bank of 12 October 2016 – CON/2016/49)

Justification

Whilst it is desirable to lay down rules to prevent the use of virtual currencies for money laundering, the European Union should not necessarily do so in such a way that endorses the use of such currencies.

Amendment 7

Proposal for a directive
Recital 11
General purpose prepaid cards have legitimate uses and constitute an instrument contributing to financial inclusion. However, anonymous prepaid cards are easy to use in financing terrorist attacks and logistics. It is therefore essential to deny terrorist this means of financing their operations, by further reducing the limits and maximum amounts under which obliged entities are allowed not to apply certain customer due diligence measures provided by Directive (EU) 2015/849. Thus, while having due regard to consumers' needs in using general purpose prepaid instruments and not preventing the use of such instruments for promoting social and financial inclusion, it is essential to lower the existing thresholds for general purpose anonymous prepaid cards and suppress the customer due diligence exemption for their online use.

Recital 13

General purpose prepaid cards, which are considered to have a social value, have legitimate uses and constitute an accessible instrument contributing to financial inclusion. However, anonymous prepaid cards are easy to use in financing terrorist attacks and logistics. It is therefore essential to deny terrorist this means of financing their operations, by further reducing the limits and maximum amounts under which obliged entities are allowed not to apply certain customer due diligence measures provided by Directive (EU) 2015/849. Thus, while having due regard to consumers' needs in using general purpose prepaid instruments for legitimate purposes and not preventing the use of such instruments for promoting social and financial inclusion, it is essential to lower the existing thresholds for general purpose anonymous prepaid cards.

Amendment

Financial Intelligence Units (FIUs), as a decentralised and sophisticated network, help Member States to better cooperate with each other. They play an important role in identifying the financial operations of terrorist networks, especially across borders, and in detecting their financial backers. Due to a lack of prescriptive international standards, FIUs maintain significant differences as regards their functions, competences and powers. Those differences should however not affect an FIU's activity, particularly its capacity to develop preventive analyses in support of all the authorities in charge of intelligence, investigative and judicial activities, and international cooperation. FIUs should have access to information and be able to exchange it without impediments, including through appropriate cooperation with law enforcement authorities. In all cases of suspected criminality and, in particular, in cases involving terrorism financing, information should flow directly and quickly without undue delays. It is therefore essential to further enhance FIUs’ effectiveness and efficiency, by clarifying the powers of and cooperation between FIUs.

_Amendment_

(13a) The creation of a European FIU assisting and supporting Member States’ FIUs in their tasks would be an efficient and cost-effective means to ensure reception, analysis and dissemination of money laundering and terrorist financing reports in the Internal Market.

Amendment 10

Recital 14

_Amendment_

(14) FIUs should be able to obtain from any obliged entity all the necessary information relating to their functions. Unfettered access to information is essential to ensure that flows of money can be properly traced and illicit networks and flows detected at an early stage. When FIUs need to obtain additional information from obliged entities based on a suspicion of money laundering, such suspicion may be triggered by a prior suspicious transaction report reported to the FIU, but also through other means such as FIU’s own analysis, intelligence provided by competent authorities or information held by another FIU. FIUs should therefore be able to obtain information from any obliged entity, even without a prior report being made by the individual obliged entity. A FIU should also be able to obtain such information on a request made by another Union FIU and to exchange the information with the requesting FIU.

Amendment 11

Recital 15

(15) Delayed access to information by FIUs and other competent authorities on the identity of holders of bank and payment accounts hampers the detection of transfers of funds relating to terrorism. National data allowing the identification of bank and payments accounts belonging to one person is fragmented and therefore not accessible to FIUs and other competent authorities in a timely manner. It is therefore essential to establish centralised automated mechanisms, such as a register or data retrieval system in all Member States as an efficient means to get timely access to information on the identity of holders of bank and payment accounts, their proxy holders, and their beneficial owners.

Amendment 12

(15) Delayed access to information by FIUs and other competent authorities on the identity of holders of bank and payment accounts and safe deposit boxes, especially anonymous ones, hampers the detection of transfers of funds relating to terrorism. National data allowing the identification of bank and payments accounts and safe deposit boxes belonging to one person is fragmented and therefore not accessible to FIUs and other competent authorities in a timely manner. It is therefore essential to establish centralised automated mechanisms, such as a register or data retrieval system in all Member States as an efficient means to get timely access to information on the identity of holders of bank and payment accounts and safe deposit boxes, their proxy holders, and their beneficial owners.

(16) In order to respect privacy and protect personal data, such registries should store the minimum data necessary to the performance of AML investigations. The concerned data subjects should be informed that their data are recorded and accessible by FIUs and should be given a contact point for exercising their rights of access and rectification. When transposing these provisions, Member States should set out maximum retention periods (supported by adequate reasoning as to their duration) for the registration of personal data in registries and provide for their destruction once the information is no longer needed for the stated purpose. Access to the registries and databases should be limited on a need to know basis.

Amendment

(18) The beneficial ownership threshold set out in Article 3(6)(a) of Directive (EU) 2015/849 does not distinguish between genuine commercial corporate entities and those that have no active business and are mostly used as an intermediary structure between the assets or income and the ultimate beneficial owner. For the latter, the set threshold is easily circumvented, leading to no identification of the natural persons who ultimately own or control the legal entity. In order to better clarify beneficial ownership information as regards intermediary structures that adopt a corporate form, it is necessary to establish a specific threshold from which indication of ownership is inferred.

Justification

The threshold needs to be low enough to cover most situations where legal persons are used to hide the identity of the beneficial owner. The threshold proposed to be inserted in Article 3, point (6)(a)(i) of Directive (EU) 2015/849 is 10%.

Directive (EU) 2015/849

Article 30 – paragraph 6 – subparagraph 2

Text proposed by the Commission

Competent authorities granted access to the central register referred to in paragraph 3 shall be those public authorities with designated responsibilities for combating money laundering or terrorist financing, including tax authorities and authorities that have the function of investigating or prosecuting money laundering, associated predicate offences and terrorist financing, tracing and seizing or freezing and confiscating criminal assets."

A sound financial system equipped with suitable supervisory and analytical resources able to detect abnormal transaction patterns can help to ensure:

Supervisory authorities must therefore be included in the list.
