Paragraph 4 a (new)

Motion for a resolution

4a. Regrets the fact that the Directive itself lacks ambition; emphasises that in order to achieve the Directive’s objectives in regard to the protection of human and animal health and the environment, it needs to be acknowledged that a shift towards a sustainable food production system that is free of both pesticides and endocrine disrupting compounds (EDCs) is urgently needed; stresses that the Commission must therefore introduce additional measures and incentives to enable this shift, such as a reduction target of 50 % by 2023;

Paragraph 8

Motion for a resolution

8. Regrets the fact that in many Member States there is not sufficient commitment to IPM practices based on its eight principles with the prioritisation of non-chemical alternatives to pesticides; regrets that one of the main challenges regarding the implementation of IPM, which is the cornerstone of the Directive, seems to be the current lack of appropriate control instruments and methods to assess compliance in the Member States, as well as of clear rules and guidance; underlines the fact that comprehensive implementation of all eight principles of IPM is one of the key measures to reduce dependency on pesticides; recognises that this approach is a first and necessary step towards sustainable agriculture in general, and towards sustainable, ecological and safe plant protection techniques in particular; stresses that only a food production system that is both environmentally friendly and beneficial (rather than detrimental) to human and animal health, will secure Europe’s food production while simultaneously strengthening biodiversity; stresses that additional measures and incentives are needed to promote and enable users to replace pesticides by sustainable, ecologically sound and safe plant protection techniques;

Paragraph 13 a (new)

Motion for a resolution

13a. Notes that resistance to pesticide active substances is a biological inevitability in fast-reproducing pests and diseases and that resistance is a growing problem; emphasises that prophylactic spraying should be prohibited, that targeted spraying should only be used as a last option rather than a first one, and that replacing pesticides by sustainable, ecologically sound and safe plant protection techniques is the preferred option as it is the only one that offers a viable solution to the problem;

Amendment

24a. Regrets the fact that the Commission and the Member States fail to recognise the urgent need for a drastic reduction in the widespread and prophylactic use of pesticides, including those with endocrine disrupting properties, in order to protect human and animal health and the environment and enable a swift transition towards sustainable, ecological and safe plant protection techniques;
