Subject: Text messages during the European elections: follow-up question

In its answer to my question (E-005960/2014) on text messages during the European elections, the Commission stated that, while this matter is governed by European legislation (Directive 2002/58/EC), the national authorities are responsible for its enforcement.

1. How does the Commission monitor the enforcement of Directive 2002/58/EC by the Hungarian national authorities?
2. Is the Commission prepared to investigate what measures the Hungarian national authorities have taken in response to illegal text messaging practices during the European elections?
