to the Commission
Rule 130
Hugues Bayet (S&D)

Subject: New unconventional monetary easing measure

The Commission has apparently put in place strict rules to prevent abuses of the ECB's planned new unconventional monetary easing measure in the form of securitisation.

According to some economists, there is a risk that European taxpayers will sooner or later have to foot the bill as the new measure is exploited for gain.

1. What is the Commission's response to this suggestion?
2. What steps has the Commission taken to prevent abuses?
