Subject: Prevention of social dumping in the road transport sector

Because of demanding working conditions and the poor balance between work and private life, employment in the road transport sector is less attractive particularly for young people and women. What is more, this sector is also faced with social dumping, making the already demanding working conditions even harder and hindering the generational renewal this sector needs.

What concrete measures does the Commission intend to take in order to reduce the risk of, or eliminate, social dumping in the road transport sector?
