Subject: Use of Structural Funds to implement demographic change in Spain

As a follow-up to my question E-000728/2015, which I asked from the point of view of regional politics as a vital tool for addressing demographic change, as it allows Member States to use the Structural Funds to develop appropriate strategies in this field, and bearing in mind that during the 2007-2013 programming period the Member States planned to spend around EUR 30 billion on such measures:

How much was effectively spent with a view to implementing demographic change in Spain, what initiatives were developed, and what are the forecasts for Spain in this field for the 2014-2020 period?
