Subject: Liberalisation of services with Serbia

Liberalisation of the services sector is one of the main aims of the EU's Association and Stabilisation Agreement with Serbia. In this respect, the contracting parties have undertaken to take the necessary steps to enable services to be supplied by EU or Serbian companies or nationals which are established in a contracting party other than that of the person for whom the services are intended.

What progress has been made on liberalising services between the EU and Serbia?

Does the Commission consider that this process will encourage Serbians to supply services in the EU to the same extent as EU citizens will do in Serbia?
