Subject: Further efforts the Council can make to be more representative of EU citizens

The Commission has previously stated that it 'strives to be representative of the increasingly diverse European citizens it serves' (in response to Written Questions E-008102/14, E-007850/14 and E-007851/14).

How does the Council think it is currently doing in terms of striving to be representative of EU citizens?

What else can the Council do to be more representative of EU citizens?
