Subject: Striving to be representative of Europe's increasingly diverse citizens

The Commission has previously stated that it 'strives to be representative of the increasingly diverse European citizens it serves' (in response to Written Questions E-008102/14, E-007850/14 and E-007851/14).

What internal strategies does it implement in striving to be representative of Europe's increasingly diverse citizens?

How does the Commission monitor and measure the success of the representation of the EU's diverse citizens that it is striving to achieve in its workforce?

How does the Commission think it is currently doing in terms of striving to be representative of EU citizens?
