Subject: How is the Commission striving to be representative of European citizens?

Previously, in its responses to written questions E-008102/14, E-007850/14 and E-007851/14, the Commission stated that it 'strives to be representative of the increasingly diverse European citizens it serves'.

In what ways is the Commission striving to be representative of the increasingly diverse European citizenry?

Could the Commission provide 10 examples of these efforts in practice?

What policies does it have in place to help it to be representative of the increasingly diverse European citizenry?
