Subject: Further efforts the European Agency for Safety and Health at Work can make to be more representative of EU citizens

The Commission has previously stated that it 'strives to be representative of the increasingly diverse European citizens it serves' (in response to Written Questions E-008102/14, E-007850/14 and E-007851/14).

How does the European Agency for Safety and Health at Work think it is currently doing in terms of striving to be representative of EU citizens?

What further efforts can the European Agency for Safety and Health at Work make with a view to being more representative of EU citizens?
