

Question for written answer E-003817/2015
to the Commission
Rule 130
Ivan Jakovčić (ALDE)

Subject: Jellyfish

According to research of the FAO, a UN organisation, jellyfish are increasingly widespread in the world's seas and oceans. Studies show that jellyfish are particularly present in the Adriatic and Black Seas. Allegedly, the reasons for the unwanted mass presence of jellyfish are global warming and overharvesting of fish.

Does the Commission share the opinion of the FAO and what measures is it taking to restore the biological balance in European seas?