Subject: The impact of ISDS on foreign investment

Following last week's discussion about the ISDS with Commissioner Malmström in the Committee on International Trade, I am interested in the following: if the mechanism for protection of international investors, which would be above national courts, were to be left out of the TTIP, does the Commission consider that this would be to the detriment of the new EU Member States, whose perception of legal security is not as strong as in established EU Member States?
