Subject: Transport policy in the peripheral regions of the EU

In a report on the EU's Cohesion Policy, the Conference of Peripheral Maritime Regions of Europe states that the EU's transport policy (the Connecting Europe Facility and trans-European networks) ignores the needs of the peripheral zones of Europe, concentrating instead on financing the central part of Europe.

Does the Commission think that the complaint made by the Conference of Peripheral Maritime Regions of Europe is justified?

What are the Commission's priorities in the next period regarding transport for the peripheral regions of the EU?
