Subject: Action to stop murders and attacks directed against Christians

In recent months we have witnessed, with grave concern, persecutions, attacks and killings directed against people in various countries, simply because they are Christians.

It is a very serious situation which seems to be worsening, while the international community seems indifferent to these attacks on religious freedom.

What stance is the EU adopting on these attacks?

Does the EU have a clear and firm strategy to call for international intervention which will stem the attacks and murders which Christians are suffering all over the world?
