Subject: Transposition of the renewable energy Directive in Spain

On 26 March, the Commission made a formal request to Spain for the proper application and implementation of the Directive governing renewable energy, and in particular fuels. In fact, the Royal Decree which the Spanish Government passed caused a great deal of legal uncertainty and a considerable financial loss to various small investors, as well as to the development of biogas plants which had invested in their expansion. For that reason, this MEP would like to know:

- To what extent is Spain incorrectly applying the renewable energy Directive?
- What measures is the Commission planning to take in order to remedy the losses caused by the incorrect application of the Directive?
