Subject: Sulphur Directive

In its answer to my question E-000955/2015, on features of the Sulphur Directive that distort competition, the Commission states that: 'Studies carried out in relation to potential detrimental effects on the competitiveness concluded that the impacts would be minor in the context of the overall environmental benefits.'

Further to this reply, could the Commission give more details of what these minor impacts would be?

Can the Commission also please provide the studies on which this conclusion is based?
