Subject: VP/HR - Negotiations concerning the conflict in Syria

Since the outbreak of revolution in Syria, the country has been plunged into a terrible war that has caused a great number of deaths and displacements. Added to this terrible situation are the actions of terrorist groups in the country, who are aggravating the situation in terms of violence and human rights, making it even worse. This week, there will be a new round of negotiations concerning the conflict in Syria at the UN headquarters in Geneva. The document that will be discussed must establish the bases for bringing hostilities to an end and promote the principles for political transition led by the Syrian people.

What is the Vice-President/High Representative's opinion of the fresh round of negotiations concerning the Syrian conflict in Geneva?

What actions is the Vice-President/High Representative implementing to support an end to hostilities in Syria and the political process of transition and reconciliation?
