Subject: Education, Audiovisual and Culture Executive Agency (EACEA) - Ensuring a workforce that is representative of EU citizens

In its response to Written Questions E-008102/14, E-007850/14 and E-007851/14, the Commission stated that it 'strives to be representative of the increasingly diverse European citizens it serves'.

How does the Education, Audiovisual and Culture Executive Agency (EACEA), which falls under the competence of the Commission, think it is currently doing in having a workforce that is representative of this diversity?

What further steps could it take to be more representative in this regard?
