

Question for written answer E-010948/2015
to the Commission
Rule 130
Adam Szejnfeld (PPE)

Subject: Development of the electric vehicle market in the EU

An increasing number of Member States are introducing various inducements to increase interest and demand for electric vehicles, e.g. passenger cars and buses. These inducements are aimed at encouraging road users to choose vehicles which emit a lower amount of pollutants into the atmosphere. This type of action contributes to attaining EU climate goals. Electric cars help to reduce emissions of carbon dioxide, thereby helping to attain the goals of Regulation (EU) No 715/2007.

Does the Commission also foresee any measures to support the production and development of electric cars on the single market?