Subject: French social gains tax on non-residents

I have been contacted by my constituents on a pressing matter concerning the European Court ruling in February that found France was acting illegally (contrary to WQ E-009844/2013) when it took social charges from capital gains and certain incomes of non-residents.

Non-residents cannot benefit from the French social system and therefore it was found that this charge was imposed illegally.

What is the Commission doing to ensure that France repays the money that it took illegally?
