Subject: Migrant crisis at the expense of Europe's peoples

The EU budget will be providing EUR 780 million in dedicated funding to support the 'relocation' scheme.

Member States no longer have a say in the matter; everything has been decided for them; they simply have to do as they have been told.

Given the economic crisis hitting Europe's peoples, how can the Commission indulge in such hypocrisy?

Is there still a faint hope that good sense will prevail? Will Europe's leaders finally manage to deal with the economic crisis in Europe rather than worry about economic migrants?
