Subject: Emergency services and the Digital Single Market Strategy

In accordance with the Digital Single Market Strategy, and only in addition to and in parallel with Member States' current emergency telecom operations, the Commission will review EU telecom rules in order to provide European citizens with the best connectivity.

How will this enhanced connectivity benefit these citizens in regard to emergency services?

For example, does the Commission plan to generalise, throughout Europe, the use of the Advanced Mobile Location system and free SMS to provide location information in case of emergency?
