Subject: Frontex officials on transgender courses

While Europe is in danger of drowning in waves of asylum-seekers and while whole borders and regions are being overrun by millions of migrants, it seems that in Brussels and Strasbourg people have nothing better to do than make life difficult for Frontex officials, who are already overworked, and the departments answerable to them.

For example, the European Parliament has decided that officials should now be sent on 'gender-specific courses' to cultivate their awareness of bisexual and transgender migrants.

Such curious and in part unrealistic decisions give rise to the following questions:

1. How many migrants with a transsexual or bisexual background have so far been identified, and how many migrants with a transsexual or bisexual background have so far spontaneously stated that they were bisexual or transsexual?
2. In accordance with what criteria are the bisexuality or transsexuality of migrants ascertained?
3. For how many hours does this transgender course which Frontex officials are required to take prevent them from doing their proper work (per person and in total), and what expenditure is anticipated on these courses?
