Subject: Sale of medicinal products on the internet

The sale of medicinal products on line is a new field that opened up on the internet some time ago and is now expanding.

Some of these products are prescription-only medicines, while others are new generation medicinal products that are as yet insufficiently well-known to patients and which they are looking to buy without seeing a doctor.

How does the Commission propose to support Member States in their efforts to run information campaigns on the danger to human health of using medicinal products without a prescription?
