

Question for written answer E-002373/2016
to the Commission
Rule 130
Elena Valenciano (S&D)

Subject: Compulsorily returning people to Turkey

There is no information on the logistics of sending people in EU territory back to Turkey. We have doubts about whether the authorities in the countries where these people are currently massed can manage the compulsory travel involved in such people returning. The organisations on the ground fear that the reception centres will become essentially holding pens, where the people to be sent back are prevented from travelling.

Will asylum-seekers' freedom of movement within the EU be limited?

Whose vessels will be used to carry people from the EU back to Turkey?

How will asylum-seekers be made to embark?