Subject: Integration of women and children in European society

In the context of the current refugee crisis, integration is one of the key questions. Children and women are, unfortunately, in a weaker position, but in the long term they will play a bigger role in building relations between Member States, European society and migrants.

1. Is the EU planning an overall strategy for the integration of female asylum seekers and refugees coming from what are generally patriarchal societies in the Middle East?
2. As part of that strategy, does the EU envisage promoting education for these women?
3. How does the EU intend to ensure that children are integrated into society and education as rapidly as possible?
