

Question for written answer E-005214/2016
to the Commission

Rule 130

Doru-Claudian Frunzulică (S&D)

Subject: Humanitarian crisis in Chad

Over two million children are currently in need of urgent humanitarian aid in Chad, a country that is facing a serious humanitarian crisis. Chad has simultaneously been affected by a food and nutritional crisis, displacement of people and natural catastrophes. It seems that the crises and conflicts continue to inflict terrible suffering on millions of children and families in Chad. The future of an entire generation of children and youths is at stake. All necessary attention must be given to the protection and development of these children, who constitute half of the country's population.

Will the European Union consider offering humanitarian assistance to the children of Chad?