

Question for written answer E-007353/2016
to the Commission
Rule 130
Edward Czesak (ECR)

Subject: Combating online hate and extremism

The fight against online hate and extremism is complex, given the conflict between freedom of speech, which applies to everyone without exception, and the infringement or violation of one person's dignity by another by posting defamatory comments online. When will the Commission draw up guidelines for internet service providers working to prevent the dissemination of hate speech? Does it believe that the Member States should adopt a binding EU legislative act regulating internet content?