Subject: New employment relationships

New forms of employment contracts and employment relations, including zero hours contracts, mini-jobs or working via online intermediaries, have increased since the financial crisis, thereby also increasing uncertainty for many workers.

1. Does the Commission intend to assess the impact of these employment relationships in order to influence the adaptation of social welfare models and legislative action to these non-standard forms of employment?
2. How does the Commission propose to address vulnerable groups in employment in light of these new employment relationships and new forms of self-employment?
