

Question for written answer E-008111/2016
to the Commission

Rule 130

Marie-Christine Arnautu (ENF)

Subject: Protecting the EU political elite

Having left Calais (France), where the 'jungle' was dismantled this week by the French government and burned down by migrants, several dozen of them have settled in the surroundings of the Brussels Gare du Nord station, setting up a new camp in the very heart of the European capital.

What measures will the Commission take to protect the European elite against the consequences of this situation, which they themselves created through their own decisions, so as to enable them to continue to hide from the realities of the situation?