Subject: Migraine

According to media outlets, citing researchers from the University Hospital in Marseille, one adult in five is affected by migraine. This disease involves a direct health cost, estimated a few years ago at EUR 3 billion per year in France, and an indirect cost related to productivity amounting to some 15-20 million work days lost.

Does the Commission have any meaningful data on the rate and prevalence of migraine in the European Union?

Does the Commission intend to develop strategies regarding migraine?
