to the Commission

Rule 130

Doru-Claudian Frunzuliță (S&D)

Subject: Refugees in Serbia

More than 7 500 migrants and refugees are currently stranded in Serbia, living in overcrowded camps and makeshift settlements. The country has agreed with the EU to host up to 6 000 people, of whom only 3 140 live in facilities adapted for winter conditions. In Belgrade, around 2 000 young people, mainly from Afghanistan, Pakistan, Iraq and Syria, currently sleep in abandoned buildings in the city centre, while temperatures plummet to as low as -20°C or -4°F. In recent months, the Serbian authorities have severely restricted the provision of humanitarian assistance, only tolerating volunteers carrying out basic distribution of blankets and food.

What solutions does the Commission propose to cover at least the most basic needs of the suffering and vulnerable people affected? Several people have already died of hypothermia at the borders of Serbia and Bulgaria.
