

Question for written answer E-004705/2017
to the Commission

Rule 130

Doru-Claudian Frunzuliță (S&D)

Subject: Promoting cyberculture

In order to achieve a safer cyberspace, Europe should accord higher priority to promoting a responsible cyberculture. It has been proven that an overwhelming percentage of successful cyber attacks are due to human error. Promoting a responsible cyberculture should be achieved by communities at national, EU and international level by investing in efforts to build confidence in mechanisms for combating cyber threats and in emerging technologies.

Does the Commission intend to promote the establishment of an information-sharing network between EU agencies, bodies and institutions?

How will the EU sponsor confidence-building measures between EU bodies, institutions and Member States, and with international organisations and third countries?