

Question for written answer E-003222/2018
to the Commission

Rule 130

Dominique Martin (ENF)

Subject: Terrorism as a daily occurrence and the EU's porous external borders

A young Iraqi man, Ali Bashar, who arrived in Germany in October 2015 at the height of the refugee crisis, is alleged to have raped and murdered a 14-year-old girl, Susanna Feldman, in Wiesbaden on 22 May 2018. Bashar 'claimed that he and the girl had been friends, but that they had had an argument and he had killed her when she threatened to call the police'¹.

Bashar's asylum application had been rejected in December 2016 and he left Germany with his family to return to Iraq on 2 June 2018, before he was named as a suspect in the Feldman case. Thus, despite being in Germany illegally and having committed a murder, he was able to cross the border in both directions undetected and untroubled by the police.

The German Chancellor has said that 'We need a real European border police that can act if necessary even if it displeases one of the [EU] states with external borders'².

1. Given that Mrs Merkel knowingly invited 4 million people into Europe, including a large number of criminals, will the Commission heed her call and send a police force to Germany to secure the EU's external borders?

2. How many asylum seekers have committed murders in the EU since 2015?

¹ <http://www.lefigaro.fr/international/2018/06/10/01003-20180610ARTFIG00041-allemagne-l-irak-extrade-le-suspect-du-meurtre-d-une-adolescente.php> (source in French)

² https://www.euractiv.com/section/future-eu/news/merkel-open-to-eu-migration-reform-cautious-on-eurozone/?utm_source=EURACTIV&utm_campaign=52ea6555f8-RSS_EMAIL_EN_Daily_Update&utm_medium=email&utm_term=0_c59e2fd7a9-52ea6555f8-114379415