Subject: The Prüm Decision

It is anticipated that the Prüm Decision will be implemented by all Member States by spring 2019, even though, according to various studies, the transparency and accountability of the Prüm regime is still problematic. Once implementation has been completed, is the Commission considering modernising the technology underlying the Prüm regime and making more (forensic) data modalities available for cross-border exchange and comparison?

Is the Commission contemplating additional measures to enhance transparency, accountability and cooperation between Member States?
