Subject: EU policy vis-à-vis the Republic of Moldova following parliamentary elections

On 30 November 2014 the Republic of Moldova held parliamentary elections. According to the official results communicated by the Central Electoral Commission, political parties that are championing closer relations with the EU won a majority of 55 seats out of the parliament's 101 seats.

Regardless of the negotiations on the future governing coalition, how will the Commission take account of these results and reflect the will expressed by voters in its policies vis-à-vis the Republic of Moldova in the context of the European Neighbourhood Policy?
