Subject: Creation of a segregated account for Greece

Greece has undertaken to set up a segregated account. The Eurogroup has announced that, among other things, Greece will enact a constitutional amendment to protect the legal status of the segregated account as a debt-servicing instrument.

1. Has the segregated account actually been set up? If it has, with what institution has it been set up and who has access to it?
2. Has the segregated account's status as an instrument for servicing Greece's debt been legally secured in the constitution in accordance with Greece's undertaking (Eurogroup statement of 21 February 2012), and, if not, what stage has been reached in the procedure for amending the constitution accordingly?
3. Have all privatisation revenues, the targeted primary surpluses and 30% of the excess primary surplus been transferred as planned to the segregated account so as to meet debt servicing obligations on a quarterly basis (Eurogroup statement of 27 November 2012). If not, why not?
