Subject: Comprehensive economic and financial analysis after Brexit

The 'leave' vote in the British referendum regarding its position in the European Union has already made dents in the UK's economy in the form of a stock drop and a three-decade low for the pound. News sources predict that the worst is yet to come. Effects on stocks, taxes, tariffs on import-export, tourism and much more will all have serious implications for both the EU's and the UK's economies.

1. Does the Commission have a comprehensive analysis, now in the first days after the UK vote to leave the EU, of the country's economic and financial situation?
2. Does the Commission have an internal analysis of the impact that Brexit will have on the EU market?
