

PACIFIC

The EU's relationship with the Pacific region has political, economic and development dimensions. The EU is the Pacific region's second largest trading partner and in June 2018 negotiations were launched for comprehensive free trade agreements with Australia and New Zealand. It has a partnership with the 15 Pacific Independent Island Countries that centres on development, fisheries and climate change, and partnerships with the four Overseas Countries and Territories and the Pacific Islands Forum.

THE EU AND THE PACIFIC REGION

The EU and the Pacific region retain a longstanding relationship, shared values and strong economic and trade links. The EU has developed partnerships in the region with Australia, New Zealand, the 15 Pacific Independent Island Countries (PICs), the four Overseas Countries and Territories (OCTs) and the Pacific Islands Forum (PIF).

The EU, Australia and New Zealand are like-minded partners with common values and interests. The EU has developed close government and private-sector relations with both countries across a broad spectrum of issues, such as climate change and disaster risk-reduction, rules-based world trade, security and development, technological research and human rights.

The EU's relationship with the Pacific Islands has traditionally been based on development cooperation in the framework of the partnership between the EU and the African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) countries. In recent years, this relationship has extended to other sectors such as the environment, good governance, energy, climate change, fisheries and human rights.

A. Australia and New Zealand

1. Australia

The European Union and Australia have a long-established partnership that dates back to the 1960s. The basis of the current relationship is the 2017 Framework Agreement between the European Union and Australia. This agreement focuses on political dialogue, security issues, international cooperation, economy and trade, justice, culture and education, energy and the environment. The text is undergoing ratification but has been in force provisionally since October 2018. Besides this treaty, the EU and Australia have signed 19 bilateral treaties and bilateral dialogues take place on a regular basis.

Australia is an important trading partner for the European Union. In 2018, the EU was Australia's third largest two-way trading partner in goods, accounting for a total of EUR 47.5 billion. Australia is the EU's 18th trade partner and the EU's main export categories are machinery, chemicals and agricultural products. Australia's main exports to the EU are minerals, crude materials and manufactured objects. The EU and Australia are negotiating a free trade agreement to facilitate commercial exchanges between the two parties. The Council issued a mandate to the Commission in May 2018 and the first round of negotiations took place in Brussels in July 2018. The second round was held in November 2018 and the third and most recent round took place in Canberra, Australia in March 2019.

2. New Zealand

EU-New Zealand relations are currently governed by the Partnership Agreement on Relations and Cooperation (PARC), which was signed on 5 October 2016. The PARC facilitates bilateral engagement by strengthening political dialogue and improving cooperation on economic and trade matters and in a wide range of other areas, from innovation, education and culture to migration, counter-terrorism, the fight against organised crime and cybercrime, and judicial cooperation.

The EU is New Zealand's third largest trading partner after China and Australia. In 2018, two-way trade in goods between the EU and New Zealand amounted to EUR 9.5 billion. New Zealand's main exports to the EU consisted of food and crude materials while the EU's principal exports to New Zealand were machinery and transport equipment. The two parties are currently negotiating a free trade agreement. Following the Council's approval of a mandate for the EU, on 22 May 2018, negotiations were formally launched on 21 June 2018. The first round was held from 16 to 20 July 2018, and yielded agreement between the two sides in most of the areas for negotiation. The second round took place from 8 to 12 October 2018 in Wellington, New Zealand. The third and most recent round was held in Brussels from 18 to 22 February 2019. The fourth round should take place in New Zealand in May 2019.

B. Other Pacific countries

The 15 Pacific Independent Island Countries (PICs)^[1] have a combined area of 528 000 km² and are part of the African, Caribbean and Pacific Group of States (ACP). The EU's relations with the PICs are focused on development cooperation, fisheries and climate change.

The EU's strategy vis-à-vis the PICs is set out in the 2012 joint communication entitled 'Towards a renewed EU-Pacific development partnership'. It builds on the framework of the Cotonou Agreement with the ACP countries, which is due to expire on 29 February 2020. The European Parliament passed a resolution on the future of ACP-EU relations beyond 2020 in October 2016. The Commission presented the Council with a proposal for the negotiating directives in December 2017. Parliament's position on the upcoming negotiations, adopted on 14 June 2018, welcomed the proposed overall architecture for future cooperation between the ACP and the EU and reiterated the importance of strengthening the partnership's parliamentary dimension. The Council adopted the negotiating mandate for the future agreement between the EU and the ACP group of countries in June 2018. The ACP side adopted its own negotiating position on 30 May 2018. Formal negotiations were launched on 28 September 2018 and the first round of negotiations was completed in December 2018. The discussions must be completed before the Agreement expires in 2020.

The EU is the Pacific region's fifth largest trading partner, with trade worth EUR 1.5 billion in 2018. The negotiations for a comprehensive economic partnership agreement (EPA) between the EU and the Pacific Island Countries were paused in 2015 pending a review of the management of Pacific fisheries resources. Meanwhile, the EU has an interim EPA with Papua New Guinea and Fiji, which was ratified by the European Parliament in January 2011. Samoa recently completed its process of accession to the EPA and started applying the agreement on a provisional basis on 31 December 2018. The Solomon Islands submitted a formal accession request in 2018 and the negotiations are ongoing. Also in 2018, Tonga declared its intention of acceding to the EPA.

The EU is the third largest donor of development assistance to the Pacific ACP countries after Australia and Japan. The European Development Fund (EDF) is the main instrument for providing EU assistance for development cooperation under the Cotonou Agreement. Funding to Pacific ACP countries and to the region's four OCTs for the 2014-2020 period under the 11th EDF amounts to around EUR 800 million. The funds from the 11th EDF are complemented by a number of thematic programmes under different financing instruments.

The PICs face major development and climatic challenges. As regards climate change, the EU and the Pacific Small Island Developing States supported the establishment of the ambitious, global Paris Agreement at the 21st UN Climate Change Conference

[1]The 15 PICs are: Fiji, Papua New Guinea and Timor-Leste, which together account for 90% of the region's landmass and population, and 12 Small Island Developing States: the Cook Islands, Kiribati, Micronesia, Nauru, Niue, Palau, the Marshall Islands, Samoa, the Solomon Islands, Tonga, Tuvalu and Vanuatu.

(COP21) in 2015. The 23rd session (COP 23), which took place in Bonn, Germany, from 6 to 17 November 2017, was chaired by Fiji.

The Pacific Islands Forum (PIF), a political grouping of 18 members, is an interlocutor for the EU for EU development funding and trade negotiations. The grouping comprises: Australia, the Cook Islands, Micronesia, Fiji, Kiribati, Nauru, New Zealand, Niue, Palau, Papua New Guinea, the Marshall Islands, Samoa, the Solomon Islands, Tonga, Tuvalu, Vanuatu, New Caledonia and French Polynesia. New Caledonia and French Polynesia, together with Pitcairn and Wallis and Futuna, make up the EU's four Overseas Countries and Territories (OCTs) in the region.

ROLE OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT

The European Parliament's relations with the Australian and New Zealand parliaments date back to 1979, when the Delegation for Relations with Australia and New Zealand \(DANZ\) was set up. Since then, the DANZ has engaged in regular interparliamentary meetings (IPMs) with the Australian and New Zealand parliaments in order to foster relations with both countries and discuss issues of common interest such as agriculture, energy, the environment and climate change, development and economic cooperation, science and technology, trade, the promotion of global and regional security in the Asia-Pacific region, countering terrorism, and human rights. The 39th and most recent EU-Australia IPM took place in Sydney and Brisbane in October 2018. The 22nd EU-New Zealand IPM was held in Wellington and Auckland in February 2018.

The European Parliament is represented in its relations with the other Pacific countries by the Delegation to the ACP-EU Joint Parliamentary Assembly \(DACP\). The DACP joins its ACP counterpart in the ACP-EU Joint Parliamentary Assembly (ACP-EU JPA), which is composed of equal numbers of EU and ACP representatives. The main task of the delegation is to prepare the meetings of the ACP-EU JPA, to evaluate and follow up on the European Parliament's activities, to organise meetings with high-level ACP figures, and to discuss topical issues relating to the implementation of the Cotonou Agreement. The 37th session of the ACP-EU JPA was held in Bucharest (Romania) in March 2019, with the next session taking place in Rwanda in December 2019.
