

Dr. Arkady Moshes is Programme Director for EU's Eastern Neighbourhood and Russia research programme at the Finnish Institute of International Affairs in Helsinki and an associate member of the Russia and Eurasia Programme at Chatham House.

Before moving to Finland in 2002, he had been since 1988 working in the Institute of Europe in Moscow. His expertise areas include Russian-European relations, Russia's policy towards the Western CIS and Baltic States as well as internal and foreign policy of Ukraine and Belarus. He has been a guest lecturer at several universities and institutes, has authored over 130 academic and analytical publications and is a frequent commentator in European and Russian media.

He holds a Ph.D in history of international relations from the Academy of Sciences of the USSR. Recent publications include: "A marriage of unequals: Russian-Ukrainian relations under president Yanukovich". In: St. Meister (ed.). Economization versus Power Ambitions. Rethinking Russia's policy towards post-Soviet states. DGAP-Schriften zur Internationalen Politik. Nomos, 2013; "Russia's European policy under Medvedev: how sustainable is a new compromise?", International Affairs, Vol. 88, No.1, January 2012 ; "Russia as a Network State. What Works in Russia When State Institutions Do Not". Palgrave Macmillan, 2011 (co-editor); "Russia-China relations: current state, alternative futures, and implications for the West" (co-editor and contributor), FIIA report 30, 2011, "Russia in European Security Architecture: Contributor or Contender?" in R.Alcaro, E.Jones (Eds.). European Security and the Future of Transatlantic Relations. IAI Research Papers, Edizioni Nuova Cultura, Rome, 2011, "Russia and the new Europe "in-between" (in Russian), Pro et Contra (Moscow), Vol. 14, No. 4-5, July-October 2010, "Avenue of Independence. Will Russian-Belarusian Relations Take the Ukrainian Path?", Russia in Global Affairs, N.2, April-June, 2010.