SHORT JUSTIFICATION

Coastal regions are fundamental for economic growth in the European Union and its Member States. Many of them are key fishing centres and import/export nodes, as well as being attractive tourist destinations.

The Commission, Council and Parliament have delivered a number of opinions on the new concept for an Integrated Maritime Policy and on what its objectives should be. It is an approach which is both complex and necessary. The overarching aim is to harness the whole potential of maritime resources in a sustainable way so as to benefit the whole of the European Union.

The development and implementation of the Integrated Maritime Policy need to be consolidated, at this stage, by allocating sufficient financial resources and ensuring the continuity of preparatory actions and pilot projects. The rapporteur therefore unreservedly supports the proposal for a regulation submitted by the Commission. In the light of the various contacts she has made, she also takes the view that the sum of money allocated is sufficient for the objectives being pursued in the last three years of the current multiannual financial framework. All the signs are that an allocation of EUR 50 million for the period 2011-2013 is likely to receive the necessary consensus.

The rapporteur would also like to stress the need to guarantee sufficient and continued funding for the next multiannual financial framework from 2014 onwards. The process of defining the next financial perspective has already begun, and given that the Integrated Maritime Policy figures among the EU's priorities, consistency demands that this policy be awarded adequate funds sufficiently in advance. This multiannual awarding of funds should not work to the detriment of other EU policies that have already been consolidated.

From the point of view of financing the various actions under this programme, a degree of regional balance should be observed when allocating the funds available. The rapporteur highlights this issue in an amendment to Article 2 of the regulation.

The remaining amendments - to Articles 2, 3, 4, 10 and 11 - are designed to fine-tune some of the regulation's objectives in order to bring them into line with those of the Integrated Maritime Policy, clarify the content of some of the actions eligible for funding and shore up the Commission's responsibility in relation to the supervision and control of the programme's implementation.
