
MEPs debate relocation, hotspots, Schengen and Dublin rules with Avramopoulos

Migration Commissioner Dimitris Avramopoulos joined the Civil Liberties Committee on Thursday to debate the implementation of measures to tackle the migration and refugee crisis, including relocation and work in the reception “hotspots”. MEPs also raised the issue of the future of Schengen as well as the need for a review of the Dublin system.

Commissioner Avramopoulos condemned the recent terrorist attacks in Istanbul and referred to the recent proposals on firearms and counter-terrorism. He called on Parliament to look for compromises on these pieces of legislation. Regarding migration and refugee flows, the Commissioner admitted the relocation scheme was not working and asked member states to step up their efforts.

Several MEPs asked the Commission to focus on promoting legal ways for migrant and refugees to enter Europe and criticised the lack of progress by Turkey in controlling migrant flows and combatting smugglers.

You can catch up with the debate via EP Live and read @EP_Justice’s coverage on Twitter.

Further information

Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs
Frontex – Management of Europe's borders \(30-01-2015\)

EP TV: Seeking asylum in the EU

EP TV: Ministering to Europe's borders

Audiovisual media: dynamic package containing videos and photos

European Commission’s press release on the border and coast guard package

Contacts

Estefania NARRILLOS

Press Service

 (+32) 2 28 31324 (BXL)

 (+33) 3 881 73661 (STR)

 (+32) 498 98 39 85

 @EP_Justice

 estefania.narrillos@europarl.europa.eu

Rikke ULDALL

Press Service

 (+32) 2 28 42976 (BXL)

 (+33) 3 881 72033 (STR)

 (+32) 498 98 32 57

 @EP_Justice

 rikke.uldall@europarl.europa.eu

EC Commissioner Avramopoulos in LIBE committee © European Union 2016 - EP