Amendment 1

Proposal for a directive
Recital 1

Text proposed by the Commission

(1) Massive flows of dirty money can damage the stability and reputation of the financial sector and threaten the single market, and terrorism shakes the very foundations of our society. In addition to the criminal law approach, a preventive effort via the financial system can produce results.

Amendment

(1) Massive flows of illicit money can damage the stability and reputation of the financial sector and threaten the single market, as well as international development, and terrorism shakes the very foundations of our society. Crucial facilitators of illicit money flows are secretive corporate structures operating in and through secrecy jurisdiction, often referred to as tax havens. In addition to the criminal law approach, a preventive effort via the financial system can produce results. However, the preventive approach should be targeted and proportional, and should not amount to an overall controlling system of the whole population.

Amendment

(4) Money laundering and terrorist financing are frequently carried out in an international context. Measures adopted solely at national or even European Union level, without taking account of international coordination and cooperation, would have very limited effects. The measures adopted by the European Union in this field should therefore be consistent with other action undertaken in other international fora. The European Union action should continue to take particular account of the Recommendations of the FATF, which constitutes the foremost international body active in the fight against money laundering and terrorist financing. With the view to reinforce the efficacy of the fight against money laundering and terrorist financing, Directives 2005/60/EC and 2006/70/EC should be aligned with the new FATF Recommendations adopted and expanded in February 2012. However, such an alignment with the non-binding FATF Recommendations has to be carried out in full respect with the Union legal order, especially as regards Union data protection law and the protection of fundamental rights as enshrined in the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union.

Recital 5

Text proposed by the Commission

(5) Furthermore, the misuse of the financial system to channel criminal or even clean money to terrorist purposes poses a clear risk to the integrity, proper functioning, reputation and stability of the financial system. Accordingly, the preventive measures of this Directive should cover not only the manipulation of money derived from crime but also the collection of money or property for terrorist purposes.

Amendment

(5) Furthermore, the misuse of the financial system to channel criminal or even clean money to terrorist purposes poses a clear risk to the integrity, proper functioning, reputation and stability of the financial system. Accordingly, the preventive measures of this Directive should cover the manipulation of money derived from serious crime and the collection of money or property for terrorist purposes.

Amendment 5
Proposal for a directive
Recital 10

Text proposed by the Commission

(10) There is a need to identify any natural person who exercises ownership or control over a legal person. While finding a percentage shareholding will not automatically result in finding the beneficial owner, it is an evidential factor to be taken into account. Identification and verification of beneficial owners should, where relevant, extend to legal entities that own other legal entities, and should follow the chain of ownership until the natural person who exercises ownership or control of the legal person that is the customer is found.

Amendment

(10) There is a need to identify any natural person who exercises ownership or control over a legal person. While finding a percentage shareholding will not automatically result in finding the beneficial owner, it can be an aid to the identification of the beneficial owner. Identification and verification of beneficial owners should, where relevant, extend to legal entities that own other legal entities, and should follow the chain of ownership until the natural person who exercises ownership or control of the legal person that is the customer is found.

Amendment 6
Proposal for a directive
Recital 11
Text proposed by the Commission

(11) The need for accurate and up-to-date information on the beneficial owner is a key factor in tracing criminals who might otherwise hide their identity behind a corporate structure. Member States should therefore ensure that companies retain information on their beneficial ownership and make this information available to competent authorities and obliged entities. In addition, trustees should declare their status to obliged entities.

Amendment

(11) The need for accurate and up-to-date information on the beneficial owner of any legal entity and all other similar existing or future legal arrangements is a key factor in tracing criminals who might otherwise hide their identity behind a corporate structure. Member States should therefore ensure that companies retain information on their beneficial ownership and make this information available to competent authorities and obliged entities through registers in line with Union data protection rules. Member States may decide to grant access to the information to other parties besides competent authorities and obliged entities. In addition, trustees should declare their status to obliged entities.

Amendment 7
Proposal for a directive
Recital 11 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

(11a) The establishment of beneficial ownership registers by Member States would seriously boost the fight against money laundering, terrorist financing, corruption, tax crimes, fraud and other financial crimes. This could be achieved by improving the operations of the existing business registers in the Member States. The interconnectivity of registers is vital to make use of the information contained therein, due to the cross-border nature of business transactions. The interconnection of business registers across the Union is already set out in Directive 2012/17/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council\(^{28a}\).

Amendment 8

Proposal for a directive
Recital 11 b (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

(11b) Technological progress has provided tools by which obliged entities can verify the identity of their customers when certain transactions occur. Such technological improvements provide time and cost-effective solutions to businesses and to customers and therefore should be taken into account when evaluating risk. Competent authorities of Member States and obliged entities should be proactive in combating new and innovative ways of money laundering, while respecting fundamental rights, including the right to privacy and data protection.

Amendment 9

Proposal for a directive
Recital 13
Text proposed by the Commission

(13) The use of the gambling sector to launder the proceeds of criminal activity is of concern. In order to mitigate the risks related to the sector and to provide parity amongst the providers of gambling services, an obligation for all providers of gambling services to conduct customer due diligence for single transactions of EUR 2 000 or more should be laid down. Member States should consider applying this threshold to the collection of winnings as well as wagering a stake. Providers of gambling services with physical premises (e.g. casinos and gaming houses) should ensure that customer due diligence, if it is taken at the point of entry to the premises, can be linked to the transactions conducted by the customer on those premises.

(25) All Member States have, or should, set up financial intelligence units (hereinafter referred to as FIUs) to collect and analyse the information which they receive with the aim of establishing links between suspicious transactions and underlying criminal activity in order to prevent and combat money laundering and terrorist financing. Suspicious transactions should be reported to the FIUs, which should serve as a national centre for receiving, analysing and disseminating to the competent authorities suspicious transaction reports and other information regarding potential money laundering or terrorist financing. This should not compel Member States to change their existing reporting systems where the reporting is done through a public prosecutor or other law enforcement authorities, as long as the information is forwarded promptly and unfiltered to FIUs, allowing them to perform their tasks properly, including international cooperation with other FIUs.

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

The new directive seeks to improve the current framework to prevent the conversion of the proceeds of criminal activity into legitimate funds via the financial system.

The Commission's proposal is drawn up to follow the review conducted by the Commission on the implementation of the current directive in force, as well as to represent the changes made to the non-binding recommendations issued by the Financial Action Taskforce (FATF).

According to the calculations of the International Monetary Fund, the extent of money laundering is vast and is estimated to reach 5% of the world's GDP. Such criminal activities undermine the integrity of the financial sector, result in loss of revenue for governments, hinder competition and adversely affect the smooth operating of the markets, as well as hamper development.

To better address the current challenges, the rapporteurs suggest further improvements to the Commission's text.

Firstly, the operations of business registers have to be improved. The identification of beneficial owner of the business or the business transaction is key in preventing money laundering and terrorist financing. As proposed by the Commission, it is the responsibility of the company to know its customer and find out who the ultimate beneficiary is. Currently businesses lack ways and means to verify the beneficial owners. This leads to disproportionate burden and liability for companies. Therefore the operations of the business registers in Member States should be improved to include beneficial ownership information that would help both authorities and businesses to verify those persons that actually gain from the business transactions. The interconnectivity of registers is vital to efficiently use this information due to the cross-border scope of business and the interconnectivity of the internal market. Therefore registers should be interconnected and accessible by the authorities and the obliged entities. Member States may grant access to the information to other parties and establish rules based on which the register can be accessed.

Secondly, the money laundering risk evaluation on the EU level has to be clarified. The rapporteurs support the evaluation of money laundering and terrorist financing risks on the EU level to better allocate resources. However, it should be clearly stated that the risk assessment contains at least the overall evaluation of the extent of money laundering, the risks associated to each relevant sector, the most widespread means used by criminals to launder illicit proceeds and the recommendation of effective deployment of resources. Due to the ever changing business environment, the evaluation should be done periodically and at least on a biannual basis.

Thirdly, the preventive approach should be a targeted and proportional, and should not amount to an overall controlling system of the whole population. It means that the fight against money laundering and terrorist financing has to be carried out in full respect with the EU legal order, especially as regards EU data protection law and the protection of fundamental rights as enshrined in the EU Charter of Fundamental Rights. Data protection concerns should be addressed at all levels: by the obliged entities, institutions of the Member States and the European Union. The limitations to the right of access to information by the data subject have to be counterbalanced by effective powers of data protection authorities, including the indirect access powers, as laid down in Directive 95/46/EC, to investigate, either ex officio or based on a complaint, any claims as regards problems with personal data processing.
