Amendment 1

Proposal for a regulation
Title 1

Proposal for a REGULATION OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COUNCIL on addressing geo-blocking and other forms of discrimination based on customers' nationality, place of residence or place of establishment within the internal market and amending Regulation (EC) No 2006/2004 and Directive 2009/22/EC (Text with EEA relevance)

Recital 1

(1) In order to realise the objective of ensuring good functioning of the internal market, as an area without internal frontiers in which the free movement of inter alia goods and services is ensured, it is not sufficient to abolish, as between Member States, only State barriers. Such abolition can be undermined by private parties putting in place obstacles inconsistent with internal market freedoms. That occurs where traders operating in one Member State block or limit the access to their online interfaces, such as websites and apps, of customers from other Member States wishing to engage in cross-border commercial transactions (a practice known as geo-blocking). It also occurs through other actions by certain traders involving the application of different general conditions of access to their goods and services with respect to such customers from other Member States, both online and offline. Whilst there may sometimes be unjustified geo-blocking and other forms of discrimination based on consumers' nationality, place of residence or temporary location within the internal market and amending Regulation (EC) No 2006/2004 and Directive 2009/22/EC (Text with EEA relevance)

Amendment 2

Proposal for a regulation Recital 1

Text proposed by the Commission

(1) In order to realise the full potential of the internal market as an area without internal frontiers in which the free movement of inter alia goods and services is ensured, it is not sufficient to abolish, as between Member States, only State barriers. Such abolition can be undermined by private parties putting in place obstacles inconsistent with internal market freedoms. That occurs where traders operating in one Member State block or limit access to their online interfaces, such as websites and apps, by consumers from other Member States wishing to engage in cross-border commercial transactions (a practice known as geo-blocking). It also occurs through other actions by certain traders involving the application of different general conditions of access to their goods and services with respect to such consumers from other Member States, both online and offline.
offline. Whereas there may sometimes be objective justifications for such differential treatment, in other cases traders deny consumers wishing to engage in cross-border commercial transactions access to goods or services, or apply different conditions in this regard, for purely commercial reasons.

objective justifications for such differential treatment, in other cases some traders’ practices deny or limit access to goods or services by consumers wishing to engage in cross-border commercial transactions, or apply in this regard different conditions which are not objectively justified.

Or. en

Justification

Commercial interests are not per se unjustified reasons for differential treatment and was therefore deleted.

Amendment 3

Proposal for a regulation
Recital 2

Text proposed by the Commission

(2) In this manner certain traders artificially segment the internal market along internal frontiers and hamper the free movement of goods and services, thus restricting the rights of customers and preventing them from benefitting from a wider choice and optimal conditions. Such discriminatory practices are an important factor contributing to the relatively low level of cross-border commercial transactions within the Union, including in the sector of electronic commerce, which prevents the full growth potential of the internal market from being realised. Clarifying in which situations there can be no justification for differential treatment of this kind should bring clarity and legal certainty for all participants in cross-border transactions and should ensure that rules on non-discrimination can be effectively applied and enforced across the internal market.

Amendment

(2) In this manner, certain traders’ practices artificially segment the internal market along internal frontiers and hamper the free movement of goods and services, thus restricting the rights of consumers and preventing them from benefitting from a wider choice and optimal conditions. Such discriminatory practices are an important factor contributing to the relatively low level of cross-border commercial transactions within the Union, including in the sector of electronic commerce, which prevents the full growth potential of the internal market from being realised. Although there may be different underlying reasons behind such practices, in many cases the legal uncertainty involved and the associated risks as regards the applicable consumer protection and environmental or labelling laws contribute to the traders’ unwillingness to engage in commercial relations with consumers from other Member States. In other cases some traders are fragmenting the market in order to increase consumer prices.
Clarifying in which situations there can be no justification for differential treatment of this kind and what the traders' responsibility would be when selling to consumers from different Member States in compliance with this Regulation should bring clarity and legal certainty for all participants in cross-border transactions and should ensure that rules on non-discrimination can be effectively applied and enforced across the internal market.

Amendment 4
Proposal for a regulation
Recital 3

Text proposed by the Commission

(3) Pursuant to Article 20 of Directive 2006/123/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council, Member States are to ensure that service providers established in the Union do not treat recipients of services differently on the basis of their nationality or place of residence. However, that provision has not been fully effective in combating discrimination and it has not sufficiently reduced legal uncertainty, particularly because of the possibility to justify the differences in treatment for which it allows and the corresponding difficulties in enforcing it in practice. Moreover, geo-blocking and other forms of discrimination based on nationality, place of residence or place of establishment can also arise as a consequence of actions by traders established in third countries, which fall outside the scope of that Directive.

Amendment

(3) Pursuant to Article 20 of Directive 2006/123/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council, Member States are to ensure that service providers established in the Union do not treat recipients of services differently on the basis of their nationality or place of residence. However, that provision has not been fully effective in combating discrimination and has not sufficiently reduced legal uncertainty. Moreover, geo-blocking and other forms of discrimination based on nationality, place of residence or temporary location can also arise as a consequence of actions by traders established in third countries, which fall outside the scope of that Directive.

Amendment 5
Proposal for a regulation
Recital 5

Text proposed by the Commission

(5) This Regulation aims at preventing discrimination based on customers' nationality, place of residence or place of establishment, including geo-blocking, in cross-border commercial transactions between traders and customers relating to the sales of goods and the provision of services within the Union. It seeks to address direct as well as indirect discrimination, thus also covering unjustified differences of treatment on the basis of other distinguishing criteria which lead to the same result as the application of criteria directly based on customers' nationality, place of residence or place of establishment. Such other criteria can be applied, in particular, on the basis of information indicating the physical location of customers, such as the IP address used when accessing an online interface, the address submitted for the delivery of goods, the choice language made or the Member State where the customer's payment instrument has been issued.

Amendment

(5) This Regulation aims at preventing discrimination based on consumers' nationality, place of residence or temporary location, including geo-blocking, in cross-border commercial transactions between a trader and a consumer relating to sales of goods and the provision of services within the Union. It seeks to address direct as well as indirect discrimination, thus also covering unjustified differences of treatment on the basis of other distinguishing criteria which lead to the same result as the application of criteria directly based on consumers' nationality, place of residence or temporary location. Such other criteria can be applied, in particular, on the basis of information indicating the physical location of consumers, such as the IP address used when accessing an online interface, the address submitted for the delivery of goods, the choice of language made or the Member State in which the consumer's payment instrument has been issued.

Justification

Clarification, that the Regulation also covers situations where the consumer is only temporarily visiting another Member State.
Amendment 6
Proposal for a regulation
Recital 5 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

(5a) This Regulation should not apply to purely internal situations in which no cross-border elements can be presumed to exist and all activities related to, inter alia, nationality, place of residence or temporary location, access to an online interface, access to goods or services or payment transactions are all confined within one and the same Member State.

Or. en

Justification

Description of purely internal situations inspired by Advocate General Wahl's Opinion in Joined Cases Venturini (C-159/12 to C-161/12, EU:C:2013:529, points 26 and 38).

Amendment 7
Proposal for a regulation
Recital 6

Text proposed by the Commission

(6) Considering that some regulatory and administrative barriers for traders have been removed across the Union in certain services sectors as a result of the implementation of Directive 2006/123/EC, in terms of material scope, consistency should be ensured between this Regulation and Directive 2006/123/EC. As a consequence, the provisions of this Regulation should apply inter alia to non-audio-visual electronically supplied services, the main feature of which is the provision of access to and use of copyright protected works or other protected subject matter, subject however to the specific exclusion provided for in Article 4 and the subsequent evaluation of that exclusion as

Amendment

(6) Given that some regulatory and administrative barriers for traders have been removed across the Union in certain services sectors as a result of the implementation of Directive 2006/123/EC, in terms of its material scope, consistency should be ensured between this Regulation and Directive 2006/123/EC. It should be noted, however, that since the adoption of Directive 2006/123/EC, regulatory and administrative barriers for traders have been partially removed also in other sectors.
provided for in Article 9. Audio-visual services, including services the main feature of which is the provision of access to broadcasts of sports events and which are provided on the basis of exclusive territorial licenses, are excluded from the scope of this Regulation. Access to retail financial services, including payment services, should therefore also be excluded, notwithstanding the provisions of this Regulation regarding non-discrimination in payments.

Amendment 8
Proposal for a regulation
Recital 7

Text proposed by the Commission

(7) Discrimination can also occur in relation to services in the field of transport, in particular with respect to the sales of tickets for the transport of passengers. However, in that regard Regulation (EC) No 1008/2008 of the European Parliament and of the Council\textsuperscript{18}, Regulation (EU) No 1177/2010 of the European Parliament and of the Council\textsuperscript{19} and Regulation (EU) No 181/2011 of the European Parliament and of the Council\textsuperscript{20} already contain broad prohibitions of discriminations covering all discriminatory practices that the present Regulation seeks to address. Furthermore, it is intended that Regulation (EC) No 1371/2007 of the European Parliament and of the Council\textsuperscript{21} will be amended to that effect in near future. Therefore, and in order to ensure consistency with the scope of application of Directive 2006/123/EC, services in the field of transport should remain outside the scope of this Regulation.

Amendment

(7) Discrimination also occurs in relation to services outside the scope of this Regulation, including in the field of audio-visual, financial, electronic communications, transport or healthcare services. Audio-visual services, including services the main feature of which is the provision of access to broadcasts of sports events and which are provided on the basis of exclusive territorial licenses, are excluded from the scope of this Regulation. Access to retail financial services, including payment services, should also be excluded, notwithstanding the provisions of this Regulation regarding non-discrimination in payments. Concerning electronic communications, the Commission has presented a proposal for a European Electronic Communications Code which upholds the principle of non-discrimination\textsuperscript{17a}. When it comes to transport, Regulation (EC) No 1008/2008 of the European Parliament and of the Council\textsuperscript{18}, Regulation (EU) No 1177/2010 of the European Parliament and of the Council\textsuperscript{19} and Regulation (EU) No 181/2011 of the European Parliament and of the Council\textsuperscript{20} already contain broad prohibitions of discrimination covering all discriminatory practices that the present Regulation seeks to address. Furthermore, it is intended that Regulation (EC) No 1371/2007 of the European Parliament and of the Council\textsuperscript{21} will be amended to that effect in the near future. For healthcare services, Directive 2011/24/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council\textsuperscript{21a} already states that patients from other Member States cannot be discriminated against with regard to nationality. Therefore, and in order to ensure consistency with the acquis, services in the field of, inter alia, audio-visual, financial, electronic communications, transport or healthcare services should, at this stage, remain outside the scope of this Regulation.

Amendment 9

Proposal for a regulation

Recital 9

Text proposed by the Commission

(9) Pursuant to Regulation (EC) No 593/2008 of the European Parliament and of the Council, the choice of law applicable to contracts between a consumer and a professional who pursues his or her commercial or professional activities in the country where the consumer has his or her habitual residence or, by any means, directs such activities to that country or to several countries including that country, may not have the result of depriving the consumer of the protection afforded to him by provisions that cannot be derogated from by agreement by virtue of the law of the country where the consumer has his or her habitual residence. Pursuant to Regulation (EU) 1215/2012 of the European Parliament and of the Council, in matters related to a contract between a consumer and a professional who pursues commercial or professional activities in the Member State of the consumer's domicile or, by any means, directs such activities to that Member
State or to several States including that Member State, a consumer may bring proceedings against the other party in the courts of the Member State where he is domiciled and proceedings may be brought against the consumer only in those courts.

Amendment 10
Proposal for a regulation
Recital 10

Text proposed by the Commission

(10) This Regulation should not affect acts of Union law concerning judicial cooperation in civil matters, notably the provisions on the law applicable to contractual obligations and on jurisdiction set out in Regulations (EC) No 593/2008 of the European Parliament and of the Council\(^2\)\(^4\) and (EU) 1215/2012 of the European Parliament and of the Council\(^2\)\(^5\) \(^6\), including the application of those acts and provisions in individual cases. In particular, the mere fact that a trader acts in accordance with the provisions of this Regulation should not be construed as implying that he directs his activities to the consumer's Member

Amendment

(10) Article 23 of Regulation (EC) No 593/2008 of the European Parliament and of the Council\(^2\)\(^4\) allows for Union law to lay down, in relation to particular matters, conflict-of-law rules relating to contractual obligations. Similarly, Article 67 of Regulation (EU) No 1215/2012 of the European Parliament and of the Council\(^2\)\(^5\) allows for other Union instruments to govern jurisdiction in specific matters. In order to enhance legal certainty for both traders and consumers and thus foster cross-border trade, this Regulation introduces specific provisions concerning conflict-of-law rules and rules on jurisdiction with regard to consumer contracts. A trader could indicate in a clear and comprehensible manner on his online interface or in his general conditions of access that he intends to sell to consumers from one or more Member States. Where a consumer from a Member State not indicated by the trader nevertheless seeks to conclude such a contract pursuant to Article 4 of this Regulation, the law applicable should be determined pursuant to Articles 3 and 4 of Regulation (EC) No 593/2008. Article 6 of Regulation (EC) No 593/2008 should not apply. Moreover, in such matters proceedings can be brought by the parties in the courts of the Member State in which the trader is domiciled. Article 18 of Regulation (EU) No 1215/2012 should not apply. Irrespective of these measures, this Regulation should be without prejudice to Union rules concerning judicial cooperation in civil matters, notably the provisions on the law applicable to contractual obligations and on jurisdiction set out in Regulations (EC) No 593/2008 and (EU) 1215/2012, including the application of those acts and provisions in individual cases. A trader may indicate on his or her website or in his or her general conditions of access, in a clear and comprehensible manner, that he or she is complying with this Regulation and thereby promotes the aim of this Regulation to abolish unjustified geo-blocking.
State for the purpose of such application.

Amendment 11
Proposal for a regulation
Recital 11

Text proposed by the Commission

(11) The discriminatory practices that this Regulation seeks to address typically take place through general terms, conditions and other information set and applied by or on behalf of the trader concerned, as a precondition for obtaining access to the goods or services in question, and that are made available to the public at large. Such general conditions of access include inter alia prices, payment conditions and delivery conditions. They can be made available to the public at large by or on behalf of the trader through various means, such as information published in advertisements, on websites or pre-contractual or contractual documentation. Such conditions apply in the absence of an individually negotiated agreement to the contrary entered into directly between the trader and the customer. Terms and conditions that are individually negotiated between the trader and the customers should not be considered general conditions of access for the purposes of this Regulation.

Amendment

(11) The discriminatory practices that this Regulation seeks to address typically take place through general terms, conditions and other information set and applied by or on behalf of the trader concerned, as a precondition for obtaining access to the goods or services in question, and that are made available to the public at large. Such general conditions of access include inter alia prices, payment conditions and delivery conditions. They can be made available to the public at large by or on behalf of the trader through various means, such as information published in advertisements or on websites, or may form part of pre-contractual or contractual information. Such conditions apply in the absence of individually negotiated terms and conditions between the trader and the consumers. Terms and conditions that are individually negotiated between the trader and the consumers should not be considered general conditions of access for the purposes of this Regulation. However, the possibility of individually negotiating terms and conditions or agreeing individually upon additional rights or obligations should not result in geo-blocking or other unjustified forms of discrimination addressed by this Regulation.
This clarification is necessary if, like in amended Art 4(1)(a), individual agreements concerning delivery are admissible.

Amendment 12

Proposal for a regulation
Recital 12

Text proposed by the Commission

(12) Both consumers and undertakings should be safeguarded from discrimination for reasons related to their nationality, place of residence or place of establishment when acting as customers for the purposes of this Regulation. However, that protection should not extend to customers purchasing a good or a service for resale, because it would affect widely used distribution schemes between undertakings in a business to business context, such as selective and exclusive distribution, which generally allow for manufacturers to select their retailers, subject to compliance with the rules on competition.

Amendment

(12) Consumers should be safeguarded from discrimination on grounds related to their nationality, place of residence or temporary location. However, in the case of dual-purpose contracts, where the contract is concluded for purposes partly within and partly outside the person’s trade and the trade purpose is so limited as not to be predominant in the overall context of the contract, that person should also be considered as a consumer.

Justification

Alignment with recital 17 of Consumers’ Rights Directive and deletion of parts of the text following limitation of scope to consumers.

Amendment

(13) The effects for consumers and on the internal market of discriminatory treatment in connection with commercial transactions relating to the sales of goods or the provision of services within the Union are the same, regardless of whether a trader is established in a Member State or in a third country. Therefore, and with a view to ensuring that competing traders are subject to the same requirements in this regard, the measures set out in this Regulation should apply equally to all traders operating within the Union.

Amendment 14

Recital 14

Text proposed by the Commission

(14) In order to increase the possibility for customers to access information related to the sales of goods and the provision of services on the internal market and to increase transparency, including with respect to prices, traders should not, through the use of technological measures or otherwise, prevent customers from having full and equal access to online interfaces on the basis of their nationality, place of residence or place of establishment. Such technological measures can encompass, in particular, any technologies used to determine the physical location of the customer, including the tracking of that by means of IP address, coordinates obtained through a global navigation satellite system or data related to a payment transaction. However, that prohibition of discrimination with respect to access to online interfaces should not be understood as creating an obligation for the trader to engage in commercial transactions with customers.

Amendment

(14) In order to increase the possibility for consumers to access information related to sales of goods and the provision of services within the internal market and to increase transparency, including with respect to prices, traders and online marketplaces should not, through the use of technological measures or otherwise, prevent consumers from having full and equal access to online interfaces on the basis of their nationality, place of residence or temporary location. Full and equal access to online interfaces in the form of a mobile application includes the possibility for the consumer to download and access any version of the mobile application a trader may operate in one or more Member States. Technological measures that prevent such access can encompass, in particular, any technologies used to determine the physical location of the consumer, including the tracking of that location by means of IP address, coordinates obtained through a global navigation satellite system or data related to a payment transaction. However, that prohibition of discrimination with respect to access to online interfaces should not be understood as creating an obligation for the trader to engage in commercial transactions with a consumer.

Or. en

Justification

A consumer must also have access to a mobile application which a trader uses in another Member State than the Member State of residence of the consumer.

Amendment 15

Proposal for a regulation
Recital 15

Text proposed by the Commission

(15) Certain traders operate different versions of their online interfaces, targeting customers from different Member States. While this should remain possible, redirecting a customer from one version of the online interface to another version without his or her explicit consent should be prohibited. All versions of the online interface should remain easily accessible to the customer at all times.

Amendment

(15) Certain traders operate different versions of their online interfaces, targeting consumers from different Member States. While this should remain possible, redirecting a consumer from one version of the online interface to another version without the trader providing clear and comprehensive information concerning such redirection should be prohibited. All versions of the online interface should remain easily accessible to the consumer at all times.

Such laws can limit customers' access to certain goods or services, for instance by prohibiting the display of specific content in certain Member States. (18) The first of those situations is where the trader sells goods and there is no cross-border delivery of those goods by or on behalf of the trader to the Member State where the customer resides. In that situation the customer should be able to purchase goods, under exactly the same conditions, including price and conditions relating to the delivery of the goods, as similar customers who are residents of the Member State of the trader. That may mean that a foreign customer will have to pick up the good in that Member State, or in a different Member State to which the trader delivers. In this situation, there is no need to register for value added tax ("VAT") in the Member State of the customer, nor arrange for the cross-border delivery of goods.

Amendment

(18) The first of those situations is where the trader sells goods and there is no cross-border delivery of those goods by or on behalf of the trader to the Member State where the consumer resides. In that situation the consumer should be able to purchase goods under exactly the same conditions, including as to price and conditions relating to the delivery of the goods, as similar consumers who are residents of the Member State of the trader. The trader may offer delivery in his or her general terms and conditions or may offer therein the possibility to collect the goods at a location to be agreed upon in a Member State other than the Member State where the consumer has his or her place of residence. That may mean that a foreign consumer will have to pick up the good in that Member State, or in a Member State different from that to which the trader delivers. general conditions of access for reasons related to such criteria should not be justified either. Those situations concern, as the case may be, the provision of services such as hotel accommodation, sports events, car rental, and entry tickets to music festivals or leisure parks. In those situations, the trader does not have to register for VAT in another Member State nor arrange for cross-border delivery of goods.

Where, in contrast, a trader does pursue his activities in the consumer's Member State or does direct his activities there, the trader has manifested its intention to establish commercial relations with consumers from that Member State and thus been able to take account of any such costs.

Amendment

(21) In all those situations, by virtue of the provisions on the law applicable to contractual obligations and on jurisdiction set out in Regulations (EC) No 593/2008 and (EU) No 1215/2012, where a trader does not pursue his activities in the Member State of the consumer or does not direct his activities there, compliance with this Regulation does not involve any additional costs for the trader associated with jurisdiction or differences in applicable law. (21a) In all those situations, the general conditions of access should comply with the laws and regulations of the Member State where the trader pursues his or her activities or to which he or she directs his or her activities. (21b) The general terms and conditions must also comply with Union acts such as Directive 1999/44/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council\(^a\) and Directive 2011/83/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council\(^b\).

Pursuant to Directive 1999/44/EC a trader is obliged to repair or replace, free of charge, goods which are not in conformity with the contract. The necessary costs to bring the goods into conformity do not entail costs of postage or transport which are additional to those costs necessary to deliver the goods as specified in the general conditions of access or as agreed upon. This Regulation should also not result in an obligation for the trader to bear additional costs in cases where a consumer exercises his right of withdrawal pursuant to Directive 2011/83/EU.

(22) Traders falling under the special scheme provided for in Chapter 1 of Title XII of Council Directive 2006/112/EC\(^2\) are not required to pay VAT. For those traders, when providing electronically supplied services, the prohibition against applying different general conditions of access for reasons related to the nationality, place of residence or temporary location of the consumer would involve a requirement to register in order to account for VAT of other Member States and might entail additional costs, which would impose a disproportionate burden, considering the size and characteristics of the traders concerned. Therefore, those traders should be exempted from that prohibition for such time as such a scheme is applicable.

(23) In all those situations, traders may in some cases be prevented from selling goods or providing services to certain customers or to customers in certain territories, for reasons related to the nationality, place of residence or place of establishment of the customer, as a consequence of a specific prohibition or a requirement laid down in Union law or in the laws of Member States in accordance with Union law. Laws of Member States may also require, in accordance with Union law, traders to respect certain rules on the pricing of books. Traders should not be prevented from complying with such laws in as far as necessary.

Amendment

(23) In all those situations, traders may in some cases be prevented from selling goods or providing services to certain consumers or to consumers in certain Member States, for reasons related to the nationality, place of residence or temporary location of the consumer, as a consequence of a specific prohibition or a requirement laid down in Union law or in the laws of a Member State in accordance with Union law.

Amendment

(24) Under Union law, traders are in principle free to decide which means of payment they wish to accept, including payment brands. However, once this choice has been made, in view of the existing legal framework for payment services, there are no reasons for traders to discriminate between customers within the Union by refusing certain commercial transactions, or by otherwise applying certain different conditions of payment in respect of those transactions, for reasons related to the nationality, place of residence or place of establishment of the customer.

In this particular context, such unjustified unequal treatment for reasons related to the location of the payment account, the place of establishment of the payment service provider or the place of issue of the payment instrument within the Union should be expressly prohibited as well. It should be further recalled that Regulation (EU) No 260/2012 already prohibits all payees, including traders, from requiring bank accounts to be located in a certain Member State for a payment in euro to be accepted.

introduced strict security requirements for the initiation and processing of electronic payments, which reduced the risk of fraud for all new and more traditional means of payment, especially online payments. Payment service providers are obliged to apply so-called strong customer authentication, an authentication process that validates the identity of the user of a payment service or of the payment transaction. For remote transactions, such as online payments, the security requirements go even further, requiring a dynamic link to the amount of the transaction and the account of the payee, to further protect the user by minimising the risks in case of mistakes or fraudulent attacks. As a result of these provisions, the risk of payment fraud in national and cross-border purchases is brought to an equal level and should not be used as an argument to refuse or discriminate any commercial transactions within the Union.

Agreements imposing on traders obligations not to engage in passive sales within the meaning of Commission Regulation (EU) No 330/2010\(^{29}\) to certain \textit{customers} or to \textit{customers} in certain territories are generally considered restrictive of competition and cannot normally be exempted from the prohibition laid down in Article 101(1) TFEU. \textit{Even when they are not caught by Article 101 TFEU, in the context of the application of this Regulation, they disrupt the proper functioning of the internal market and they may be used to circumvent the provisions of this Regulation.} The relevant provisions of such agreements and of other agreements in respect of passive sales requiring the trader to act in violation of this Regulation should therefore be automatically void. However, this Regulation, and in particular its provisions on access to goods or services, should not affect agreements restricting active sales within the meaning of Regulation (EU) No 330/2010.

Recital 29

Text proposed by the Commission

(29) This Regulation should be regularly evaluated, with a view to proposing amendments where necessary. The first evaluation should concentrate, in particular, on the possible extension of the prohibition of Article 4(1)(b) to electronically supplied services, the main feature of which is the provision of access to and use of copyright protected works or other protected subject matter, provided that the trader has the requisite rights for the relevant territories.

Amendment

(29) This Regulation should be regularly evaluated, with a view to proposing amendments where necessary. The first evaluation should concentrate, in particular, on the possible extension of the scope of this Regulation to other sectors such as audio-visual, financial or electronic communication services, transport services or healthcare services. In particular, the evaluation of the extension to audio-visual services should be based on detailed price and cost data which only service providers possess. Therefore, those providers should cooperate in the evaluation in order to assess whether the inclusion of those services within the scope of this Regulation would lead to the evolution of business models which are more efficient than those currently used.

Justification

While the current proposal rests in line with the Services Directive, it should be for the Commission to look into the need to extend the scope of this Regulation to sectors currently not covered in this Regulation or the Services Directive.

In order to achieve the objective of effectively addressing direct and indirect

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

I. Introduction

As part of its eCommerce package, the Commission presented on 25 May 2016 a proposal for a regulation on addressing geo-blocking and other forms of discrimination based on customers' nationality, place of residence or place of establishment. The purpose of the regulation is to ensure that customers have the same access to goods and services as local customers. The Regulation builds upon the provisions of the Services Directive (Art 20), which already establishes the principle for non-discrimination, but has proven difficult to enforce in practice due to legal uncertainty concerning what practices would – and would not be – considered justified.

The regulation seeks to provide more legal certainty and enforceability by defining specific situations when there can be no justified reason for discrimination on the grounds of nationality or residence. In addition, the proposed regulation bans the blocking of access to websites and the use of automatic re-routing without the customer's prior consent. The proposed regulation also includes provisions of non-discrimination within accepted payment means.

The Regulation is part of the overall strategy to stimulate cross-border e-commerce, a key driver for growth, by ensuring better access to goods and services, by building trust and providing greater certainty and by reducing administrative burden.

II. Position of the Rapporteur

The Rapporteur shares the overall objective of the Commission’s proposal, namely to realise the full potential of the internal market as an area without internal frontiers in which the free movement of goods and services is ensured. The internal market is far from a reality. eCommerce is a key driver for growth, with annual growth rates in the EU averaging over 13%. However, only 15% of consumers bought online from another EU country and 8% of traders sold cross-border (as compared to 24% domestically). Traders and consumers face continued barriers. In the online environment, such barriers become immediately apparent – for consumers, for instance, it is incomprehensible why they should be prevented from accessing certain websites, why they should not be able to buy certain goods in other Member States or why they should be paying a different price based on their nationality or their residence alone.

At the same time, there are clearly justified reasons for such differential treatment by traders. One such reason could be for instance the fact that the trader does not have the required intellectual property rights in a particular territory. Or traders may consider applying different conditions of access due to for instance the additional costs incurred because of the distance involved or the technical characteristics of the provision of the service or the different market conditions.

The Commission proposal is a welcome step in the right direction. It provides more clarity by defining specific situations where it can never be considered justified to discriminate on the grounds of nationality or residence. It also brings welcome clarity of the type of actions that would be considered unacceptable – such as banning the blocking of access and the non-discrimination provisions within accepted payment means. However, the Commission proposal leaves important elements unanswered.

1. Legal certainty for consumers and traders

The Rapporteur is of the view that one of the reasons why traders may be hesitant to engage in commercial relations with consumers from other Member States is the legal uncertainty and the associated risks as regards the applicable consumer protection, environmental or labelling laws. This is not addressed in the Commission proposal, which leaves considerable uncertainty for traders and consumers alike.

To address this, the Rapporteur proposes a new Article 8a on applicable law and jurisdiction. The Article sets out to clarify that in those cases where a trader clearly sets out his intention to sell to consumers from one or more Member States and a consumer from another Member State wants to conclude a contract with this trader under the rights granted by Article 4 of this Regulation, then the trader will treat the consumer in the same way as he treats local consumers. In other words, the trader would be able to apply the consumer protection, environmental, labelling or product safety requirements of his Member State. Likewise, the responsible court should be that of the trader’s Member State.

2. Scope

In the interest of proportionality, the rapporteur proposes to limit the scope of the regulation to consumers only, with one important exception, namely in case of dual purpose contracts with a limited trade focus, that person should also be considered as a consumer. The Rapporteur can accept that at this stage the scope of the regulation is aligned with that of the Services Directive to the extent possible in order to ensure consistency, in other words non-economic services of general interest, transport services, audio-visual services, gambling, healthcare and certain other services are excluded from the scope of the Regulation. However, the Rapporteur believes that it is necessary to evaluate this in the context of the first review of the regulation.

However, the Rapporteur disagrees with the Commission on the question of how to treat electronically supplied services for the provision of access to and use of copyright-protected works or other protected subject-matter. The Rapporteur believes that there are numerous incidents of discrimination in relation to electronically supplied services such as e-books, e-music, games or software. She therefore proposes to include them within the scope of Article 4, provided that the trader has the requisite rights for the relevant territories.

3. Additional clarifications

In addition, the Rapporteur proposes a number of clarifications to the draft text of the Commission. This include in particular:

- A clarification that the non-discrimination prohibition covers not only nationality and place of residence but also temporary location
- A clarification that purely internal situations without a cross-border component are excluded (Art 1a)
- A simplification as regards Art 3 access to online interfaces: the Rapporteur considers the explicit consent provision suggested by the Commission as too burdensome both for business and consumers and considers it sufficient to impose an information obligation concerning redirection as well as full access to the original interface. The Rapporteur clarifies that the explanations are to be given in the language of the online interface. The rapporteur also considers that the access to online interfaces shouldn’t be limited not only by traders but also by online marketplaces.
- A clarification in Art 4 that traders can still apply different general conditions of access between Member States or within a Member State offered to consumers on a specific territory or a specific group of consumers, as long as these are not defined on the basis of nationality, residence or temporary location. In other words, a trader would still be able to offer different prices in different web portals, as long as a consumer approaching a given web shop from another Member State is able to buy the product under the same conditions as a local consumer.

- A clarification in Art 5 on payment methods to avoid increased risks of fraud linked to certain payment methods by clarifying that the trader has the right to withhold a good or service until he has received confirmation that the payment transaction has been properly initiated.
