Amendment

2. Promotes the need to view very cautiously a possible role for CSDP in EU counter terrorism efforts; reminds that relevant documents⁴ prepared by the Council and the bodies of the European External Action Service such as the Terrorism Working Party show that no concept for the role of CSDP in counter terrorism is available; welcomes that since several years counter terrorism efforts in Europe are characterized by a criminal justice approach mainly relying on national justice and police and cooperation with identical authorities in other countries; warns that the integration of CSDP into EU counter terrorism policy could lead to a militarisation of EU counter terrorism and thus lead to the weakening of the criminal justice approach, downgrading of human rights, civil liberties and humanitarian law standards;
