DRAFT OPINION

of the Committee on Legal Affairs

for the Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs on the proposal for a directive of the European Parliament and of the Council on protection of individuals with regard to the processing of personal data by competent authorities for the purposes of prevention, investigation, detection or prosecution of criminal offences or the execution of criminal penalties, and the free movement of such data

(COM(2012)0010 – C7-0024/2012 – 2012/0010(COD))

Rapporteur: Axel Voss

SHORT JUSTIFICATION

The EU is rightly seeking to equip itself with a comprehensive, coherent, modern, high-level framework for data protection, since the challenges facing data protection are numerous. They include globalisation, technological development, enhanced online activity, uses related to more and more criminal activities, and security concerns.

The relevant European rules (Article 16 TFEU and the recognition in Article 8 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the right to protection of personal data as an autonomous right) must therefore provide individual citizens with legal certainty and confidence in the behaviour of data controllers, and in particular of prosecution and enforcement authorities, since violations of data protection provisions can lead to serious risks for the fundamental rights and freedoms of individuals and the values of the Member States.

Consequently, the European Parliament has always taken the view that the fundamental rights to data protection and privacy include the protection of persons from possible surveillance and abuse of their data by the state itself. The Commission proposal for a directive on 'the protection of individuals with regard to the processing of personal data by competent authorities for the purposes of prevention, investigation, detection or prosecution of criminal offences or the execution of criminal penalties, and the free movement of such data' is consistent with this view, and the rapporteur essentially welcomes it.

Nevertheless, data protection in the field of criminal investigation and enforcement must be adapted to other considerations relating to the rule of law and deriving from the state monopoly on the use of force. Data protection legislation in relation to averting risk, establishing and safeguarding public security and investigating crimes and executing criminal penalties must match the tasks to be performed by the state and ensure that it is still able to perform these tasks effectively, in the interests of all its citizens.

Data protection legislation at European level is generally characterised by differing levels of competence. What used to be known as the first pillar is characterised by extremely far-reaching competence deriving from the internal market. What used to be known as the third pillar is defined by cooperation rather than communitisation. Thus Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA went furthest in setting minimum standards in this area.

It should also be borne in mind, in the field of police and judicial cooperation, that legal traditions have developed very differently in the EU Member States in the course of the centuries, and any alteration to well-established national structures and traditions in this sensitive area through European rules should therefore be introduced cautiously and gradually.

The situation regarding the scope of Article 16 TFEU in relation to European data protection law is also controversial and is yet to be clarified through case-law. This creates legal uncertainty which the rapporteur considers should be resolved through pragmatism:

The draft directive proposed by the Commission includes the exchange of data at domestic level within the scope of the directive, whereas Article 16(2) TFEU gives the EU competence only within the scope of Union law. This does not include domestic processing of data in the police area (Article 87 TFEU).

A peculiarity of data protection is that it has horizontal effects and is liable to have an impact in areas that are not designated as falling within the unrestricted competence of the EU, thereby possibly breaching the subsidiarity principle.

In light of these considerations, the rapporteur takes the view that the directive should do no more than set minimum standards. In practice, this renders obsolete the question of 'only cross-border' or 'also domestic' data protection, and a higher level of data protection may in any case be maintained.

However, in order to preserve the balance with data protection as a fundamental right, the directive must at the same time strengthen and give a clear definition of individual rights. The principles of transparency and scrutiny must be enshrined, but they should not run counter to the purpose of averting risks and prosecuting crimes.

The rapporteur considers the following amendments necessary in order to safeguard this balance between preserving the state monopoly on the use of force and guaranteeing public order and security and the physical integrity of the individual, on the one hand, and the right to data protection on the other:

Chapter I

- Averting risks is included in the scope (Article 1).
- The Member States are clearly permitted to set higher standards (Article 1). The objective is not harmonisation but setting minimum standards.
- The scope is expanded to include the Union institutions, bodies, offices and agencies (Article 2).

Chapter II

- The text of the key section on 'principles of data processing' is brought into line with the General Data Protection Regulation. The package approach means that these principles should tally (Article 4).
- Article 5 is deleted, since it represents an increase in bureaucracy and costs for the Member States and the legal effects have not been analysed.
- Purpose limitation in respect of the processing of data is a key principle of data protection. Articles 6 and 7 have been thoroughly reworked and expanded on the basis of Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA (here: Article 8 (accuracy), Article 3 (purpose limitation) and Article 13 (purpose limitation in respect of data from other EU countries).

Chapter III

The amendments to Chapter III focus on the individual concern requirement and an actual individual request for stored information.

- The possibility to limit the right to information (Article 12) is restricted to individual cases on examination, thereby strengthening individual rights.
- The right to information at the time when the data are obtained without any request being made is cut back in favour of national rules.
- The right to erasure and rectification has been reworded and strengthened. At the same time, exceptions to the right to erasure have been introduced, such as the legal obligation to retain data.

Chapter IV

- Article 20 'Joint controllers' is deleted, since it lowers the standard of data protection. In the context of external cooperation, both controllers should remain jointly liable vis-à-vis the data subject.
- Article 23 'Documentation' has been tightened up in line with Article 10 of Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA. As a result, Article 24 'Keeping of records' is deleted.
- Article 27 'Security of processing' has been brought into line with the text of Article 22 of the Framework Decision.
- Prior consultation/privacy impact assessment is introduced in the shape of new Article 28a, which has been taken from Article 23 of Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA.
- 'Data breaches' are to be notified only to the supervisory authority and not to the data subject (Articles 28 and 29).

Chapter V

- Article 35b incorporates the provisions of Article 13 of the Framework Decision and lays down specific rules on the handling of data from other Member States.

- Article 36 has been reworded; it should be possible to transfer data to third countries in spite of a negative decision on the adequacy of protection, in a very limited number of individual cases and subject to strict conditions, in order to protect vital interests, e.g. where lives are at risk.

Chapter VIII

- The right to bring class actions in Article 50 is deleted. Any complaint should be based on individual concern and individual cases.

Delegated and implementing acts

- The Commission proposal has been reworked to ensure that uniform rules apply to the adoption of delegated and implementing acts and prevent any drift of competence. As with the planned amendments to the draft General Data Protection Regulation (COM (2012) 11), preference is given to delegated acts or decisions at national level.

Non-contractual liability

- It is possible that the Commission could take the wrong decision regarding the adequacy of data protection in a third country or an international organisation and that this could result in harm. Such cases should be mentioned in the directive.

AMENDMENTS

The Committee on Legal Affairs calls on the Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs, as the committee responsible, to incorporate the following amendments in its report:

Amendment 1 Proposal for a directive Recital 7

Text proposed by the Commission

(7) Ensuring a consistent and high level of protection of the personal data of individuals and facilitating the exchange of personal data between competent authorities of Member States is crucial in order to ensure effective judicial co-operation in criminal matters and police

Amendment

(7) Ensuring a consistent and high level of protection of the personal data of individuals and facilitating the exchange of personal data between competent authorities of Member States is crucial in order to ensure effective judicial co-operation in criminal matters and police cooperation. To that aim, the level of protection of the rights and freedoms of individuals with regard to the processing of personal data by competent authorities for the purposes of prevention, investigation, detection or prosecution of criminal offences or the execution of criminal penalties must be equivalent in all Member States. Effective protection of personal data throughout the Union requires strengthening the rights of data subjects and the obligations of those who process personal data, but also equivalent powers for monitoring and ensuring compliance with the rules for the protection of personal data in the Member States.

cooperation. To that aim, minimum standards must be ensured in all Member States with regard to any processing of personal data by competent authorities for the purposes of prevention, investigation, detection or prosecution of criminal offences or the execution of criminal penalties.

(12) In order to ensure the same level of protection for individuals through legally enforceable rights throughout the Union and to prevent divergences hampering the exchange of personal data between competent authorities, the Directive should provide harmonised rules for the protection and the free movement of personal data in the areas of judicial co-operation in criminal matters and police co-operation.

Amendment

(12) In order to ensure a minimum level of protection for individuals through legally enforceable rights throughout the Union and to prevent divergences hampering the exchange of personal data between competent authorities, the Directive should provide a minimum level of harmonisation concerning the protection and the free movement of personal data in the areas of judicial co-operation in criminal matters and police co-operation.

Recital 15

Text proposed by the Commission

(15) The protection of individuals should be technological neutral and not depend on the techniques used; otherwise this would create a serious risk of circumvention. The protection of individuals should apply to processing of personal data by automated means, as well as to manual processing if the data are contained or are intended to be contained in a filing system. Files or sets of files as well as their cover pages, which are not structured according to specific criteria, should not fall within the scope of this Directive. This Directive should not apply to the processing of personal data in the course of an activity which falls outside the scope of Union law, in particular concerning national security, or to data processed by the Union institutions, bodies, offices and agencies, such as Europol or Eurojust.

(16) The principles of protection should apply to any information concerning an identified or identifiable natural person. To determine whether a natural person is identifiable, account should be taken of all the means likely reasonably to be used either by the controller or by any other person to identify the individual. The principles of data protection should not apply to data rendered anonymous in such a way that the data subject is no longer identifiable.

Amendment

(16) The principles of protection should apply to any information concerning an identified or identifiable natural person. To determine whether a natural person is identifiable, account should be taken of all the means likely reasonably to be used either by the controller or by any other person working together with the controller to identify the individual. The principles of data protection should not apply to data rendered anonymous in such a way that the data subject is no longer identifiable.

Amendment 5

Amendment

(23) It is inherent to the processing of personal data in the areas of judicial co-operation in criminal matters and police co-operation that personal data relating to different categories of data subjects are processed. Therefore a clear distinction should as far as possible be made between personal data of different categories of data subjects such as suspects, persons convicted of a criminal offence, victims and third parties, such as witnesses, persons possessing relevant information or contacts and associates of suspects and convicted criminals.

Or. de

Justification

There are problems in the area of risk prevention by the police in defining the scope of the Directive and Regulation. If the risk to be prevented is not punishable as a crime and the police are not therefore preventing a criminal offence in the sense of Article 1(1) of the proposal for a Directive, the Directive cannot be applied (e.g. missing persons files, suicides). The provisions of the General Data Protection Regulation are completely inappropriate for risk prevention.

Distinction between different categories of data subjects

1. Member States shall provide that, as far as possible, the controller makes a clear distinction between personal data of different categories of data subjects, such as:

(a) persons with regard to whom there are serious grounds for believing that they have committed or are about to commit a criminal offence;

(b) persons convicted of a criminal offence;

(c) victims of a criminal offence, or persons with regard to whom certain facts give reasons for believing that he or she could be the victim of a criminal offence;

(d) third parties to the criminal offence, such as persons who might be called on to testify in investigations in connection with criminal offences or subsequent criminal proceedings, or a person who can provide information on criminal offences, or a contact or associate to one of the persons mentioned in (a) and (b); and

(e) persons who do not fall within any of the categories referred to above.

Or. de

Justification

The need for across-the-board obligations to distinguish between different categories of data subjects is not apparent, it is questionable whether they are practicable, and the associated red tape and expenditure is substantial. In the absence of a ruling on the legal consequences, it is uncertain what the legal consequences of making the distinction would be.

Amendment 40
Proposal for a directive
Article 6 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

1. Member States shall ensure that, as far as possible, the different categories of personal data undergoing processing are distinguished in accordance with their degree of accuracy and reliability.

1. The competent authorities shall ensure that, as far as possible, personal data are factually accurate, complete and, if necessary, up to date.

Amendment 41
Proposal for a directive
Article 6 – paragraph 2

Text proposed by the Commission

2. Member States shall ensure that, as far as possible, personal data based on facts are distinguished from personal data based on personal assessments.

Amendment

2. The competent authorities shall ensure that personal data which are inaccurate, incomplete or no longer up to date are not transmitted or made available. To that end, the competent authorities shall, as far as practicable, verify the quality of personal data before they are transmitted or made available. As far as possible, in all transmissions of data, available information shall be added which enables the receiving Member State to assess the degree of accuracy, completeness, up-to-dateness and reliability. If personal data were transmitted without request the receiving authority shall verify without delay whether these data are necessary for the purpose for which they were transmitted.

3. If it emerges that incorrect data have been transmitted or data have been unlawfully transmitted, the recipient must be notified without delay. The recipient shall be obliged to rectify the data without delay in accordance with paragraph 1 and Article 15 or to erase them in accordance with Article 16.

Or. de

Justification

The proposed text is based on Article 8 of Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA and bans the transmission of factually inaccurate data.

Lawfulness of processing

Amendment

deleted

Member States shall provide that the processing of personal data is lawful only if and to the extent that processing is necessary:

- (a) for the performance of a task carried out by a competent authority, based on law for the purposes set out in Article 1(1); or*
- (b) for compliance with a legal obligation to which the controller is subject; or*
- (c) in order to protect the vital interests of the data subject or of another person; or*
- (d) for the prevention of an immediate and serious threat to public security.*

Amendment 43
Proposal for a directive
Article 7 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

Article 7(a)

Lawfulness of processing; purpose limitation

1. The processing of personal data is only lawful if carried out in accordance with the following principles.

2. Personal data may be collected by the responsible authorities as part of their work for specified, explicit and legitimate purposes. Legitimate purposes are served by data collection in particular if it is

- (a) for the performance of a task carried out by a competent authority, based on law for the purposes set out in Article 1(1); or*
- (b) for compliance with a legal obligation to which the controller is subject; or*
- (c) in order to safeguard the data subject's legitimate interests; or*
- (d) in order to safeguard the legitimate* interests of another person, unless it is clearly in the legitimate interest of the data subject that the data processing does not take place;

(e) for the prevention of a threat to public security.

3. The processing of personal data must fulfil the purpose for which they were collected. Further processing for another purpose shall be permitted in so far as it

(a) serves lawful purposes (paragraph 2);

(b) is necessary for this other purpose;

(c) is not incompatible with the purpose for which the data were collected.

4. Personal data may be further processed for historical, statistical or scientific purposes, by way of derogation from paragraph 3, if the Member States provide for appropriate safeguards such as rendering data anonymous.

Or. de

Justification

The amendment is based on Article 3 of Framework Decision 2008/977/JI and sets out purpose limitation in more detail. Paragraph 4 makes data processing for research purposes possible whilst also protecting the individual concerned. This kind of arrangement is lacking in the Commission's draft directive. The introduction of data which has been rendered anonymous, as provided for in Article 3, also serves this purpose.

Amendment 44
Proposal for a directive
Article 7 b (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

Article 7b

Special provisions for personal data from other Member States

Further to the general principles of data processing, the following arrangements shall be applicable to personal data transmitted or made available by the competent authorities of another Member State:

1. Personal data may be forwarded to private parties only if

(a) the competent authority of the Member State from which the data were obtained has consented to transmission in compliance with its national law;

(b) no legitimate specific interests of the data subject prevent transmission; and

(c) transfer is essential in particular cases for the competent authority transmitting the data to a private party for:

(i) the performance of a task lawfully assigned to it;

(ii) the prevention, investigation, detection or prosecution of criminal offences or the execution of criminal penalties;

(iii) the prevention of an immediate and serious threat to public security, or

(iv) the prevention of serious harm to the rights of individuals.

The competent authority transmitting the data to a private party shall inform the latter of the purposes for which the data may exclusively be used.

2. Personal data may be further processed under the provisions of Article 7(3) only for the following purposes other than those for which they were transmitted or made available:

(a) the prevention, investigation, detection or prosecution of criminal offences or the execution of criminal penalties other than those for which they were transmitted or made available;

(b) other judicial and administrative proceedings directly related to the prevention, investigation, detection or prosecution of criminal offences or the execution of criminal penalties;

(c) the prevention of an immediate and serious threat to public security; or

(d) any other purpose only with the prior consent of the transmitting Member State or with the consent of the data subject, given in accordance with national law.

This exemption shall be without prejudice to Article 7(4).

3. Where, under the law of the transmitting Member State, specific processing restrictions apply in specific circumstances to data exchanges between competent authorities within that Member State, the transmitting authority shall inform the recipient of such restrictions. The recipient shall ensure that these processing restrictions are met.

Or. de

Justification

The revision undertaken in this article adopts the rules of Article 13 of Framework Decision 2088/977/JI on the policy for data from other Member States and affords them special protection. Article 7a serves to protect the Member State in which data originate and thereby creates the necessary confidence for internal Union data exchange, according to which transmitted data will not be further processed by host states simply as they choose.

Amendment

Article 7c

Establishment of time limits for erasure and review

Appropriate time limits shall be established for the erasure of personal data or for a periodic review of the need for the storage of the data. Procedural measures shall ensure that these time limits are observed.

Justification

The addition is taken word-for-word from Article 5 of Framework Decision 2008/977/JI.

Amendment 46
Proposal for a directive
Article 8 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

1. Member States shall prohibit the processing of personal data revealing race or ethnic origin, political opinions, religion or beliefs, trade-union membership, of genetic data or of data concerning health or sex life.

Amendment

1. The processing of personal data revealing racial or ethnic origin, political opinions, religious or philosophical beliefs or trade-union membership and of data concerning health or sex life shall be permitted only if

Justification

This Article has been reworded along the lines of Article 6 of Framework Decision 2008/977/JI. Even if it deviates from the prohibition rule of the draft directive, the processing of sensitive data remains permissible only under stringent conditions. In view of the significance of DNA evidence trails, the prohibition of the processing of genetic data introduced by the Commission has been deleted.

Article 9 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

1. Member States shall provide that measures which produce an adverse legal effect for the data subject or significantly affect them and which are based solely on automated processing of personal data intended to evaluate certain personal aspects relating to the data subject shall be prohibited unless authorised by a law which also lays down measures to safeguard the data subject's legitimate interests.

Amendment

1. Measures which produce an adverse legal effect for the data subject or significantly affects him and which is based solely on automated processing of data intended to evaluate certain personal aspects relating to the data subject shall be permitted only if authorised by a law which also lays down measures to safeguard the data subject's legitimate interests.

Or. de

Justification

The revision undertaken in this article reverts to the wording of the Framework Decision (Article 7 of 2008/977/JI). Profiling remains permissible only under strict conditions, even when the prohibition rule is not adhered to.

- which the personal data are intended;*
- (c) the period for which the personal data will be stored;*
- (d) the existence of the right to request from the controller access to and rectification, erasure or restriction of processing of the personal data concerning the data subject;*
- (e) the right to lodge a complaint to the supervisory authority referred to in Article 39 and its contact details;*
- (f) the recipients or categories of recipients of the personal data, including in third countries or international organisations;*
- (g) any further information in so far as such further information is necessary to guarantee fair processing in respect of the data subject, having regard to the specific circumstances in which the personal data are processed.*

2. Where the personal data are collected from the data subject, the controller shall inform the data subject, in addition to the information referred to in paragraph 1, whether the provision of personal data is obligatory or voluntary, as well as the possible consequences of failure to provide such data.

3. The controller shall provide the information referred to in paragraph 1:

- (a) at the time when the personal data are obtained from the data subject, or*
- (b) where the personal data are not collected from the data subject, at the time of the recording or within a reasonable period after the collection having regard to the specific circumstances in which the data are processed.*

4. Member States may adopt legislative measures delaying, restricting or omitting the provision of the information to the data subject to the extent that, and as long as, such partial or complete restriction constitutes a necessary and proportionate measure in a democratic society with due regard for the legitimate interests of the person concerned:

(a) to avoid obstructing official or legal inquiries, investigations or procedures;

(b) to avoid prejudicing the prevention, detection, investigation and prosecution of criminal offences or for the execution of criminal penalties;

(c) to protect public security;

(d) to protect national security;

Article 11 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

Article 11a

Provision of information to the data subject

1. Member States shall ensure that the data subject is informed regarding the collection or processing of personal data by the controller, in accordance with national law.

2. When personal data have been transmitted or made available between Member States, each Member State may, in accordance with the provisions of its national law referred to in paragraph 1, ask that the other Member State does not inform the data subject. In such cases the latter Member State shall not inform the data subject without the prior consent of the other Member State.

Or. de

Justification

This restricts only the right to information with no enquiry as to the time of data collection, referral instead being made to Member States' rules. The right of individuals to information set out in Article 12 remains unaffected.

Joint controllers

Member States shall provide that where a controller determines the purposes, conditions and means of the processing of personal data jointly with others, the joint controllers must determine the respective responsibilities for compliance with the provisions adopted pursuant to this Directive, in particular as regards the procedures and mechanisms for exercising the rights of the data subject, by means of an arrangement between them.

Or. de

Justification

Article 20 lowers the data protection standard and was therefore deleted without being replaced. It should be left to joint controllers to decide whether to make an arrangement internally for a division of responsibilities. Externally there should be joint liability between both parties, to the benefit of the data subject.

The German amendment would bring the text more closely into line with the wording of Article 22(2)(j) of Council Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA by replacing the word 'beschädigt' with the word 'verfälscht'. The English version of this part of the present proposal is already in line with the wording of the Framework Decision.

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

Article 28a

Prior consultation

Member States shall ensure that the competent national supervisory authorities are consulted prior to the processing of personal data which will form part of a new filing system to be created where:

(a) special categories of data under Article 8 are to be processed, or

(b) the type of processing, in particular using new technologies, mechanism or procedures, holds otherwise specific risks for the fundamental rights and freedoms, and in particular the privacy, of the data subject.

Or. de

Justification

The wording is taken from Article 13 of Framework Decision 2008/977/JI

Amendment 89
Proposal for a directive
Article 28 – paragraph 5

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

5. The Commission shall be empowered to adopt delegated acts in accordance with Article 56 for the purpose of specifying further the criteria and requirements for establishing the data breach referred to in paragraphs 1 and 2 and for the particular circumstances in which a controller and a processor is required to notify the personal data breach. deleted

Or. de

Justification

The criteria and requirements for establishing a data breach are already sufficiently specified in paragraph 1. The proposed delegation of legislative powers would in any event touch upon essential elements which can not be delegated, and they should be specified in the basic act. A corresponding change is also suggested in the General Data Protection Regulation.

Amendment

Article 29 deleted

Communication of a personal data breach to the data subject

1. Member States shall provide that when the personal data breach is likely to adversely affect the protection of the personal data or privacy of the data subject, the controller shall, after the notification referred to in Article 28, communicate the personal data breach to the data subject without undue delay.

2. The communication to the data subject referred to in paragraph 1 shall describe the nature of the personal data breach and contain at least the information and the recommendations provided for in points (b) and (c) of Article 28(3).

3. The communication of a personal data breach to the data subject shall not be required if the controller demonstrates to the satisfaction of the supervisory authority that it has implemented appropriate technological protection measures, and that those measures were applied to the personal data concerned by the personal data breach. Such technological protection measures shall render the data unintelligible to any person who is not authorised to access it.

4. The communication to the data subject may be delayed, restricted or omitted on the grounds referred to in Article 11(4).

Amendment 95
Proposal for a directive
Article 34 – paragraph 3

Text proposed by the Commission

3. The Commission may decide, within the scope of this Directive, that a third country or a territory or a processing sector within that third country or an international organisation ensures an adequate level of protection within the meaning of paragraph 2. Those implementing acts shall be adopted in accordance with the examination procedure referred to in Article 57(2).

Amendment

3. The Commission shall be empowered to adopt delegated acts in accordance with Article 56 to supplement the list in Annex [x] of third countries, territories or processing sectors within third countries or international organisations which ensure an adequate level of protection within the meaning of paragraph 2. When determining the level of protection, the Commission must consider whether the relevant legislation, both general and sectoral, in force in the third country or international organisation, guarantees effective and enforceable rights including effective administrative and judicial redress for data subjects, in particular for those data subjects whose personal data are being transferred.

Or. en

Justification

Because of the far-reaching nature of the determinations involved, they go beyond what is required for uniform conditions for implementation, and these non-essential elements must therefore be the subject of a delegation of legislative power in accordance with Article 290 TFEU. A corresponding change is also suggested in the General Data Protection Regulation.

Amendment 96
Proposal for a directive
Article 34 – paragraph 4

Text proposed by the Commission

4. The implementing act shall specify its geographical and sectoral application, and, where applicable, identify the supervisory authority mentioned in point (b) of paragraph 2.

4. According to Article 340(2) TFEU and settled case-law of the Court of Justice, the Union shall, in accordance with the general principles common to the laws of the Member States, make good any damage caused by its institutions in the performance of their duties, including any damage due to wrongful use of personal data following an incorrect determination under paragraphs 2 and 3.

Or. en

Justification

The non-contractual liability of the Union in cases where incorrect determinations are made on the basis of the criteria in paragraphs 2 and 3 should furthermore be made explicit.

5. The Commission may decide, within the scope of this Directive, that a third country or a territory or a processing sector within that third country or an international organisation ensures an adequate level of protection within the meaning of paragraph 2, in particular in cases where the relevant legislation, both general and sectoral, in force in the third country or international organisation, does not guarantee effective and enforceable rights including effective administrative and judicial redress for data subjects, in particular for those data subjects whose personal data are being transferred. Those implementing acts shall be adopted in accordance with the examination procedure referred to in Article 57(2), or, in cases of extreme urgency for individuals with respect to their right to personal data protection, in accordance with the procedure referred to in Article 57(3). deleted

Transfers by way of appropriate safeguards

(a) appropriate safeguards with respect to the protection of personal data have been adduced in a legally binding instrument; or

(b) the controller or processor has assessed all the circumstances surrounding the transfer of personal data and concludes that appropriate safeguards exist with respect to the protection of personal data.

Article 35a

Transfers with appropriate safeguards

1. Where the Commission has taken no decision pursuant to Article 34, a transfer of personal data to a recipient in a third country or an international organisation may take place where:

(a) appropriate safeguards with respect to the protection of personal data have been adduced in a legally binding instrument;

(b) the controller or processor has assessed all the circumstances generally surrounding the transfer of personal data (Article 43(2)) and concludes that appropriate safeguards exist with respect to the protection of personal data, or

Or. de

Amendment 102
Proposal for a directive
Article 35 b (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

Article 35b

Transfer of personal data originating in other Member States

1. Member States shall provide that any transfer by competent authorities of personal data transmitted or provided by the responsible authorities of another Member State, including further onward transfer to a third country or international organisation, may take place only if:

(a) the recipient in the third country or the receiving international body is responsible for the prevention of risk or the investigation, detection or prosecution of criminal offences or the execution of criminal penalties;

(b) the Member State from which the data were transferred has given its consent to transfer in compliance with its national law, and

(c) in cases covered by paragraph 3 of Article 34(a) and Article 35(b) and (c), the Member State from which the data were transferred also considers that, in compliance with its national law, appropriate safeguards exist in respect of the protection of the data transferred.

2. Onward transfer without prior consent in accordance with paragraph 1(b) shall be permitted only if transfer of the data is essential for the prevention of an immediate and serious threat to public security of a Member State or a third State or to essential interests of a Member State and the prior consent cannot be obtained in good time. The authority responsible for giving consent shall be informed without delay.

3. By way of derogation from point (c) of paragraph 1, onward transfer of personal data may take place if the national law of the Member State transferring the data so provides on the grounds of:

(a) the compelling and legitimate interests of the data subject; or

(b) compelling and legitimate interests, in particular important public interests.

4. Personal data may be forwarded to private parties only under the conditions set out in paragraph 1 of Article 7(a)

Or. de

Justification

Article 35b corresponds to Article 13 of Framework Decision 2008/977/JI; it introduces special rules on the handling of data from other Member States and affords them special protection. This provision serves to protect the Member State in which data originate and thereby creates the necessary confidence for internal Union data on the basis that transmitted data will not be further processed by host states as they choose.

Amendment 103
Proposal for a directive
Article 36 a (new)

Article 36a

Derogations in the case of specific data transfers after weighing the competing interests involved

1. 1. Where the Commission concludes pursuant to Article 34(5) that an adequate level of protection does not exist, personal data may not be transferred to the third country or a territory or a processing sector within that third country, or the international organisation in question, if, in the case in question, the legitimate interests of the data subject in preventing any such transfer outweigh the public interest in transferring such data .

2. The adequacy of the level of protection in place in the case in question shall be one of the factors taken into account when the merits of the competing interests involved are compared. The assessment of the adequacy of the level of protection in the case in question shall give particular consideration to the circumstances surrounding the proposed data transfer, including in particular:

(a) the nature of the data that are to be transferred,

(b) the purpose(s) served by transferring it, and

(c) the duration of the proposed processing operation in the third country.

By way of derogation from Articles 1 and 35, Member States may provide that a transfer of personal data to a third country or an international organisation may take place only on condition that:

(a) the transfer is necessary to safeguard the vital and legitimate interests of the data subject or of another person, particularly in terms of their physical safety and well-being;

(b) the transfer is necessary to safeguard legitimate interests of the data subject where the law of the Member State transferring the personal data so provides; or

(c) the transfer is necessary for the purposes of prevention, investigation, detection or prosecution of criminal offences or the execution of criminal penalties; or

(e) the transfer is necessary in individual cases for the establishment, exercise or defence of legal claims relating to the prevention, investigation, detection or prosecution of a specific criminal offence or the execution of a specific criminal penalty.

4. In individual cases an adequate standard of protection may exist if the third country or a territory, a processing sector or an interstate or supranational body within that third country, or the international organisation, guarantees that the transferred data will receive an adequate level of protection.

Or. de

Justification

The rewording of Article 36 follows the logic of Articles 34 and 35. In strictly limited individual cases it must be possible for data to be transferred – subject to very strict conditions – to third countries whose data protection standards are judged to be inadequate in order to safeguard interests of paramount importance, such as life and limb.

may take place only on condition that:

(a) the transfer is necessary in order to protect the vital interests of the data subject or another person;

(b) the transfer is necessary to safeguard legitimate interests of the data subject where the law of the Member State transferring the personal data so provides; or

(c) the transfer of the data is essential for the prevention of an immediate and serious threat to public security of a Member State or a third country; or

(d) the transfer is necessary in individual cases for the purposes of prevention, investigation, detection or prosecution of criminal offences or the execution of criminal penalties; or

Amendment 105
Proposal for a directive
Article 37 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

Member States shall provide that the controller informs the recipient of the personal data of any processing restrictions and takes all reasonable steps to ensure that these restrictions are met.

Amendment

Member States shall provide that the controller informs the recipient of the personal data of any processing restrictions and takes all reasonable steps to ensure that these restrictions are met. The first sentence shall also apply to any processing restrictions with which the controller must comply pursuant to paragraph 3 of Article 7(a).

Justification

When data is transferred within the EU, any processing restrictions in place at national level must also apply when the data is transferred to a third country; otherwise, there would be insufficient confidence in the system to enable EU to be transferred within the EU.

For the purposes of paragraph 1, the Commission shall take appropriate steps, within the scope of application of this Directive, to advance the relationship with third countries or with international organisations, and in particular their supervisory authorities, where the Commission has decided that they ensure an adequate level of protection within the meaning of Article 34(3). In so doing the Commission shall have due regard to the competences of the Member States and the legal or practical measures taken in connection with the exercise of those competences.
