222a. Calls on the Member States to ensure that all ‘emergency legislation’ on counter-terrorism complies with the principles of necessity and proportionality, and that the measures taken within this context are clearly defined, limited in time and subject to due democratic scrutiny; emphasises that enacting emergency legislation is not always the most relevant action that can be taken and that it has been shown that its effects are only significant when used over a very short-term period; is concerned about the transposition of emergency provisions into the ordinary legislation of various Member States when these emergency measures are diverted from their aims and used to suppress social movements and undermine freedom of movement and expression<sup>1</sup>;
