Motion for a resolution

Amendment

Ma. whereas, in order to allow Parliament to dedicate sufficient attention to and undertake the specific efforts necessary for contributing effectively and responding to the challenges posed by terrorism, a standing parliamentary committee responsible for internal security and terrorism should be set up within Parliament; whereas the setting up of such a committee would signal Parliament's engagement with and understanding of the importance of the issues of internal security, international organised crime and terrorism, which are at the forefront of EU citizens' concerns; whereas it would also reflect the significance of this issue for Parliament and mirror the institutional set-up in other EU institutions and bodies, such as the creation of a Security Union Task Force and the appointment of a Commissioner for the Security Union at the Commission, the creation of a European Counter Terrorism Centre (ECTC) at Europol, and the Working Party on Terrorism at the Council;
